

TIME AND NARRATIVE

Volume 2

Paul Ricoeur

Translated by Kathleen McLaughlin
and David Pellauer

French philosopher Ricoeur examines the notions of time and plot in fiction and theories of literature, using works of Woolf, Mann, and Proust as examples.

"Mr. Ricoeur writes the best kind of philosophy—critical, economical, and clear."—Eugen Weber, New York Times Book Review, review of volume 1

SECRET LEAVES

The Novels of Walter Scott

Judith Wilt

Wilt establishes the thematic unity of Scott's work and offers general and scholarly readers alike an overdue appreciation of this novelist's vast and complex output. What emerges from her study is an intricate portrait of Scott's purposes and self-image as an artist, which hid ambition and seriousness within the "secret leaves" of a Greenwood-Robin Hood myth.

MARY SHELLEY & FRANKENSTEIN

The Fate of Androgyny

William Veeder

Drawing upon feminism, psychoanalysis, stylistics, and biographical materials, William Veeder provides an aggressive, original reading of both Mary Shelley and her masterpiece. Focusing on Frankenstein, he shows how Shelley's novels reflect a lifelong concern with androgyny and bifurcation—the harmonious balance of traits traditionally seen as "masculine" and "feminine" and the desolating polarization of those traits into machismo and weakness.

ICONOLOGY Image, Text, Ideology

W. J. T. Mitchell

"A unique, profound, and disturbing work."—Nelson Goodman, Harvard University

In this original definition and defense of the literary-pictorial image and its many analogues, Mitchell discloses the role of ideology in the very concept of imagery. His critiques of thinkers such as Edmund Burke, Lessing, Gombrich, Nelson Goodman, and Marx reveal the fears and fetishes and notions of class and gender rooted in theories of imagery.
