MAKING LITERATURE MATTER An Anthology for Readers and Writers

John Schilb, Indiana University

John Clifford, University of North Carolina at Wilmington

AUGUST 1999/PAPER/1728 PAGES

Fusing the most current work in literary and composition studies — and ideally suited for introductory literature courses where critical thinking and writing are essential — Making Literature Matter wraps an innovative writing text around a uniquely organized literature anthology, featuring a diverse selection of 51 stories, 90 poems, 12 plays, and 19 essays.

- A new kind of writing text that helps students build their personal responses to literature into compelling arguments about it. Part One emphasizes how argument provides students with techniques for finding, clarifying, and developing a position on literary issues in their papers.
- A new kind of thematic anthology that focuses on issues to think and write about. In Part Two, 60 unique clusters of literature address provocative sub-issues within 6 broad, universal themes; the sharp focus of each cluster stimulates effective critical comparisons and unusually engaged writing.

“Making Literature Matter really does a terrific job of introducing students to the craft of responding to literature, and does so with good, vivid examples, in plenty of detail. The most distinctive new contribution is the wonderful rhetoric-based treatment of argument.”

— Kevin J. H. Dettmar, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale
