force essential for the maintenance of authority and the will to use it. What the final results will be we don't know. Conceivably, present policies can be enforced on the long period of time, with occasional violent outbreaks, vigorously suppressed. In the other hand, Armageddon is a probability, though unlikely in the near future. last outpost of white rule in Africa.

Editor's Note

This issue of the Bulletin attempts to cover as completely as possible the annual meeting of the African Studies Association in Hartford, September In one or two instances papers were not available for summary.

Thanks are particularly due to chairmen of plenary sessions and section arizings, who have been instrumental in obtaining papers and frequently in sumthe papers account of the sessions. She hopes that an adequate presentation of papers has been made, but in some disciplines where highly technical knowlthe was demanded, such as linguistics, this is a hope and a prayer but not an
