The History of the Irish Newspaper 1685-1760

R. L. MUNTER

The first detailed study of the Irish periodical press from its beginnings to 1760. Dr Munter discusses the aims of its pioneers, its contents, equipment, ethics and position as a branch of bookselling and printing. He traces the evolution of the newspaper from a simple chronicle of news, through a maze of government restriction and persecution, to a journal with considerable influence on social, economic and political ideas.

The Journals of George Sturt, 1890-1927

A selection, edited and introduced by

E. D. MACKERNESS

'Sturt's Journal is a blend of self-education, autobiography, speculation, and observation, in which the latter two elements predominate. His present editor, in addition to supplying essential preliminaries in which not a shade of unjustified claim appears, does everything tactful to ensure reading which is never without clarity and seldom without grace.' Times Literary Supplement.

Whig Organization in the General Election of 1790

Selections from the Blair Adam Papers

Edited with an introduction by DONALD E. GINTER

Professor Ginter demonstrates that the origins of modern British electoral organization and political parties can be dated, contrary to previous assumptions, at about the end of the American War. The papers of William Adam, the Whigs' political manager, show the extent and quality of electoral organization in the Whig Opposition Party at the time of the 1790 election campaign.
