1. In footnotes 55, 93, 94, 95, 96 and 97, the citation to Rights and Wrongs of Children’s Work is corrected to: Michael F. C. Bourdillon, Deborah Levison, Ben White, and William E. Myers, Rights and Wrongs of Children’s Work (New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 2009).

This citation was originally: Michael F. C. Bourdillon, Ben White, and William E. Myers, Rights and Wrongs of Children’s Work (New Brunswick, NJ: Rutgers University Press, 2009). This fails to acknowledge Deborah Levison. The Review apologises to Prof Levison for this error.

2. Footnote 3 is corrected to: According to ILO/UNICEF in 2020 ‘160 million children - 63 million girls and 97 million boys - were in child labour globally... There were 16.8 million more children aged 5 to 11 in child labour in 2020 than in 2016’. See the International Labour Organization (ILO), ‘Child Labour: Global Estimates 2020, Trends and the Road Forward’, p. 8, available at: {<https://data.unicef.org/resources/childlabour-2020-global-estimates-trends-and-the-road-forward/>} accessed 24 August 2021. See also Ionel Zamfir, ‘Child Labour: A Priority for EU Human Rights Action’, Briefing, European Parliament (2019), esp. pp. 3–4, available at: {https://www.europarl.europa.eu/RegData/etudes/BRIE/2019/633142/EPRS\_BRI\(2019\)633142\_EN.pdf633142_EN.pdf)} accessed 8 January 2022.

This footnote originally said: Early in 2020 the number of children forced to work rose to 160 million. Rising poverty compelled 16.8 million more children in the age group of five to eleven years old to labour. See the International Labour Organization (ILO), ‘Child Labour: Global Estimates 2020, Trends and the Road Forward’, p. 8, available at: {<https://data.unicef.org/resources/childlabour-2020-global-estimates-trends-and-the-road-forward/>} accessed 24 August 2021.
