Mind and Language

---

Wolfson College Lectures 1974

---

Edited by Samuel Guttenplan

---

The abilities to think and to use language are not independent of one another, and an acceptable account of the nature of this interdependency must be primarily philosophical. The issues surrounding this question are among the most important and characteristic of philosophy today, and these essays – by G. E. M. Anscombe, Donald Davidson, Michael Dummett, D. Føllesdale, P. T. Geach, and W. V. Quine – provide a useful starting point for its solution. £4.25

Truth and Meaning

Essays in Semantics

---

Edited by Gareth Evans and John McDowell

---

Most of the papers in this volume bear upon the general question ‘What is the nature of an acceptable theory of meaning?’, taking as their starting point an answer proposed by Donald Davidson. The contributors are Donald Davidson, Michael Dummett, J. A. Foster, Saul Kripke, B. Loar, C. A. B. Peacocke, P. F. Strawson, B. Taylor, D. Wiggins, M. J. Woods and C. J. G. Wright. £9.50

---

Problems from Locke

---

J. L. Mackie

---

There is a growing tendency for philosophers to pay closer attention to John Locke’s work, and as a result to treat it with greater respect. This book will support and encourage this tendency. It takes up several topics including perception, substance and essence, abstract ideas and universals, personal identity, and empiricism and innate notions. £6 paper covers £2.50

---

Hume’s Moral Epistemology

---

J. Harrison

---

This book is a critical examination of Book III, Part I of A Treatise of Human Nature, together with the relevant parts of An Enquiry Concerning the Principles of Morals, in which David Hume tries to answer the question ‘How do we know the difference between right and wrong, good and bad, virtue and vice?’. The author unravels and assesses Hume’s arguments against ethical racialism, and the different strands in his positive views, in the light of subsequent advances made in moral epistemology. £4.25 paper covers £1.95

What is Truth?

C. J. F. WILLIAMS

A study in philosophical logic of the meaning of 'true'. Dr Williams demonstrates the shortcomings of various analyses which interpret truth as a property or as a relation, and clears up a number of important points about propositions, quantification, definite descriptions, and correspondence. This 'deflationary metaphysics' is interwoven with a positive theory of his own which seeks to develop ideas of the late Arthur Prior.

Linguistic Behaviour

JONATHAN BENNETT

Jonathan Bennett presents a view of language as essentially a matter of systematic, communicative behaviour. He offers an account of meaning in terms of the communicative intentions of speakers, and tries to show how these intentions can be known from behaviour other than the use of language itself. This theory of language is related to rival and related approaches and in particular to the work of Grice, Ziff, Davidson, Quine, Lewis and Chomsky.

a short history of WESTERN PHILOSOPHY

Johannes Hirschberger

Now at last this helpful compendium is available in the English language. Since its appearance on the continent fifteen years ago it has been reprinted almost every year, affording a useful account for student and layman alike of the most important names and concepts down through the ages.

Hirschberger provides a survey stretching from the philosophy of antiquity to the present century, thus dealing with those who laid the foundations of many current trends in modern philosophy.

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE PHILOSOPHY OF BERNARD LONERGAN

Hugo A. Meynell

'... Lonergan's philosophy is one of the outstanding achievements of our time, and applicable to a vast range of pressing intellectual, moral, social, political, educational and religious problems. Its neglect up to the present seems to me both astonishing and deplorable. Practitioners of the relevant fields of enquiry on the whole do not attempt either to use or refute Lonergan's arguments, but take the simpler course of failing to advert to their existence. If this introduction does anything at all to reverse the situation, it will have achieved its purpose' — from the author's conclusion. £10.00

THE RELEVANCE OF NATURAL SCIENCE TO THEOLOGY

William H. Austin

The thesis that religion and science are mutually exclusive realms of thought has a large following among scientists and theologians today. William Austin is explicitly concerned with the question of the bearing of science on theology, not theology on science, and examines in some detail the main types of argument and what if anything they can be seen to prove. £7.95
