Colonialism and Under-development in East Africa 1919-39

E. A. Brett

Lecturer in Political Science, University of Sussex

An original and provoking study which seeks to establish a general theory of colonialism. British Colonial policy was an adjustment of interest groups within an ideologically agreed framework, and not just a muddled empirical resolution of differing interests. The author maintains that the efforts of this policy were inimical to economic development in East Africa. £4.00 £2.00 paperback

Structure and Conflict in Nigeria 1960-65

K. W. J. Post and Michael Vickers

*Professor of Political Science, Institute of Social Studies, The Hague
Assistant Professor of Political Science, St Thomas University, Fredericton,
New Brunswick*

'Well narrated and closely documented . . . story of Nigeria's crooked and critical elections of December 1964 and October 1965 . . . As regards its content and authority, it can – as one has come to expect of the author of the classic work on Nigeria's psephology – be recommended as an important addition to the study of the electoral traumas that in 1964–65 brought Nigeria to the brink of the abyss.' Times Literary Supplement £3.50

Organised Labour in the Nigerian Political Process 1947-71

Robin Cohen

Lecturer in Sociology and Associate of the Centre of West African Studies, University of Birmingham

A comprehensive study of the role of organised labour in Nigerian politics. The author employs a multidisciplinary approach to look at the history of the labour movement, the internal structure of the unions, their influence in wage determination and their relationship to political parties and to the Army. Forthcoming £6.00

African Women in Towns

An Aspect of Africa's Social Revolution

KENNETH LITTLE

This book analyses the changing position of women in an urban context in sub-Saharan Africa. Professor Little uses the concept of urbanization in order to analyse the radical changes taking place. He shows how certain women's movements, though different in some respects from Women's Lib., are growing out of the African woman's desire for a new relationship with men. This leads him to consider, among other things, the part played by women in the political arena.

AFRICAN ADMINISTRATIVE STUDIES

CAFRAD

The African Training and Research Centre in Administration for Development (CAFRAD) is an African Regional Institution carrying out and co-ordinating research and study on administrative problems connected with social and economic development in African countries. By the 1st November 1973, twenty African States had become members of CAFRAD.

CAFRAD organizes seminars, in-service training courses, refresher courses for senior African administrators and top managers. It also acts as a liaising body for schools and Institutes of Public Administration, universities and all organizations concerned with public administration in Africa.

To help promote this last objective CAFRAD publishes a bilingual review, in French and English, every six months.

AFRICAN ADMINISTRATIVE STUDIES

This review, of which each number is devoted to some specific field of administrative science, includes studies, documents, monographs, news of ENAs and IPAs, and selected bibliographies.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.

Contributors of accepted articles will be asked to assign their copyright, on certain conditions, to Cambridge University Press, to help protect their material, particularly in the U.S.A.
