Essays on the Sociological Theories of Tocqueville, Marx, and Durkheim

Gianfranco Poggi. This volume investigates aspects of the sociological theories of Tocqueville, Marx, and Durkheim that have not previously been explored in detail. Through an interpretive reading of selected writings, the author shows how these ideas can make a substantial contribution to contemporary sociological theory. $8.95

Every Fifth Child

The Population of China

Leo A. Orleans. This work attempts to tell the story of China's population: a little about what it was, but mostly about what it is and what we know and don't know about it. The result is the most comprehensive and up-to-date analysis of China's massive population problems, focusing on areas where policy and daily life coincide: the schools, farms, and factories. $8.50

Language in Sociocultural Change

Essays by Joshua A. Fishman

Selected by Anwar S. Dil. Sociocultural change is viewed by the author as the most fitting context in which to consider language in society. These papers demonstrate the importance of language-related concerns for modern social science and cover such topics as language maintenance and shift, societal bilingualism, the sociology of language, and language planning. $10.00

Sugar Without Slaves

The Political Economy of British Guiana, 1838–1904

by Alan H. Adamson

Sugar Without Slaves is a study of the wide range of problems confronting a multiracial, multicultural, one-crop British colony in the post-emancipation nineteenth century. Its principal themes have to do with the survival of sugar as the dominant crop, of the plantation economy as the dominant system of production, and of the sugar planters as the dominant social and political group. Most of the data are from primary sources and the evidence is new and voluminous. Historians and social scientists alike will find here fascinating insights into the complex network of social and economic relations that developed in this Caribbean country a century ago and have a clear bearing on the tensions besetting Guyanese society today. $12.50

The Dimensions of the Past

Materials, Problems, and Opportunities for Quantitative Work in History

edited by Val R. Lorwin and Jacob M. Price

The thirteen papers in this innovative collection were designed to increase awareness in the historical profession of the possibilities and problems of quantitative work in fields other than U.S. history. The contributors, all leading figures in their fields, confronted four major issues: the kinds of quantitative data available for the problems, periods, and areas under discussion; the chief uses already made of these data; the most important problems in utilizing such data; and the most promising directions for further work, both substantive and methodological. As a result, this volume provides a remarkably wide bibliographical, methodological, and critical guide to current quantitative work in European, Asian, and Latin American History. $17.50

Economic Opportunity and White American Fertility Ratios, 1800–1860

by Colin Forster and G. S. L. Tucker

The role of economic factors in fertility behavior has attracted growing interest among economists, historians, economic historians, and demographers. The point of departure for this new study is the discussion of population density as an important causal factor in fertility patterns in Yasukichi Yasuba's Birth Rates of the White Population in the United States, 1800–1860. Forster and Tucker shift the statistical analysis of the census data from rank correlations by state, which Yasuba had done, to more refined regression analysis. In doing so, they show much more clearly than anyone else has yet shown that high fertility ratios were related to the thinness of settlement. $6.50

World Handbook of Political and Social Indicators

second edition

by Charles L. Taylor and Michael C. Hudson

This new, completely revised edition of the World Handbook is one of the most complete collections of cross-national attribute and event data available to scholars of comparative and international politics. Included are series measuring political performance and structure, aspects of external relations, economic development and differentiation, demographic characteristics, and other social phenomena for the 136 countries which had one million or more population in 1965 or were members of the UN by 1968. Mr. Taylor discusses the analysis of the data and suggests uses to be made of them in the final chapter of the book. $15.00

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalisations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.

Contributors will receive 50 offprints bound in the journal covers. Any additional offprints must be ordered on receipt of the first proof.
