Journal of Business Ethics publishes original articles from a wide variety of methodological and disciplinary perspectives concerning ethical issues related to business. It is the policy of the editor to encourage the broadest possible scope for this exciting journal: the term "business" is understood in a wide sense to include all systems involved in the exchange of goods and services, while "ethics" is circumscribed as all human action aimed at securing a good life.

Systems of production, consumption, marketing, advertising, social and economic accounting, labor relations, public relations and organizational behavior are analyzed from a moral viewpoint. The style and level of dialogue involves all who are interested in business ethics - the business community, universities, governmental bodies and consumer groups.

Speculative philosophy as well as reports of empirical research are welcomed. In order to promote a dialogue among various interested groups, papers are presented in a style free of specialist jargon. Book reviews are a regular feature of Journal of Business Ethics.
