THE REVIVAL OF PRIVATE LAW IN CENTRAL AND EASTERN EUROPE

Essays in Honor of F.J.M. Feldbrugge

edited by George Ginsburgs,

Donald D. Barry, William B. Simons

This volume explores the web of relations between civil society, civil law, and the constitutional or law-governed state in this geopolitical environment. It traces the process of resurgence of civil law institutions on the local scene during the seminal stages of the bid to effect the switch to an entrepreneurial civil culture. The focus is on the critical function performed by the civil law canon in the creation of a private economy and the flourishing of a civil society, with special emphasis on how the revival of a private law repertory can contribute toward containing the state's natural penchant for intrusion into most areas of public life and enhance the status of human rights.

INTERPRETATION: THE IMF AND INTERNATIONAL LAW

by Sir Joseph Gold

This work concentrates largely on the practice of the IMF in matters of interpretation. The work shows that the motive for resorting to interpretation is not always the obscurity or ambiguity of texts. Other considerations may be taken into account, such as demonstrating that consensus or broad agreement exists on a particular decision. The motive for an interpretative decision may be to prevent the appearance of dictation by one class of members to another class. A similar motive helps to explain why special majorities of the total voting power of all members are required by the treaty for specified categories of decisions.

CHALLENGES TO THE NEW WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION

edited by Pitou van Dijk, Gerrit Faber

This book tackles key questions such as the types of standards that are required, the roles of institutions and the enforcement mechanisms with regard to trade related investment measures, intellectual property rights, labor and environmental conditions. This book also deals with the WTO compatibility of the far-reaching integration schemes and the lessons for global liberalization that might be learned from these regional experiments.

STUDIES IN LEGAL SYSTEMS:

MIXED AND MIXING

edited by Esin Öricü, Elspeth Attwooll, Sean Coyle

This book brings together a wide range of legal orders, some well known, some not so often studied. Eighteen legal orders are covered by experts directly acquainted with the orders they write about. The analysis offered is far beyond a descriptive one, the general aim being to provide a basis for discussion by covering paths, methods and specific techniques, consequences and implications of legal migration. The newly emerging democracies of Eastern Europe, for example, are looking at the pool of models when re-designing their systems. Such systems in transition open up a whole new world of possibilities for research. The two final chapters on spectral jurisprudence and the conceptual search bring into focus and widen the analysis further.

CONSTITUTIONAL DIMENSIONS OF EUROPEAN ECONOMIC INTEGRATION

edited by Francis Snyder

This book consists of the proceedings of an international conference on 'European Law in Context: Constitutional Dimensions of the European Economic Integration.' The conference had two purposes. First to take stock of research already done and then to develop further the study of EU Law in its social, political, cultural and economic contexts. The second purpose was to bring together a small group of specialists for an informal but structured discussion of the major issues concerning the future of European Integration.

RIGHTS, EMERGENCIES AND JUDICIAL REVIEW

by Imtiaz Omar

This book makes a significant contribution to the understanding of issues of comparative constitutionalism in emergent politics. Recurrent states of emergency in Malaysia, Sri Lanka and Bangladesh provide the background for a comparative examination of constitutional emergency powers, individual rights, and judicial review. This work examines the extent to which the Court in these countries has performed its expected role, identifies problems in approaches to interpretation which have been adopted, and suggests alternatives to constitutional interpretation and judicial review.

PARTICIPATION IN WORLD TREATIES ON THE PROTECTION OF THE ENVIRONMENT

A Collection of Data

edited by Maria Clara Maffei, Laura Pineschi, Tullio Scovazzi, Tullio Treves

An exercise in the law of treaties, focusing on treaties for the protection of the environment. The texts of the relevant instruments are not reproduced since much of the work is devoted to the legal formalities, such as the dates of ratification, the territorial extensions, the subtle wordings of declarations and reservations, etc.

UNITED STATES RESPONSES TO EXCESSIVE MARITIME CLAIMS

Second Edition

by J. Ashley Roach, Robert W. Smith

This second edition was prepared for the wider audience which must deal with the traditional uses provisions of the modern Law of the Sea Convention now in force. A new chapter on marine data collection has been added and documents have been included which will further facilitate the use of this expanded volume as a working tool for the practitioner and student alike.

THE CONCEPT OF TREATY IN INTERNATIONAL LAW

by Jan Klabbers

In this study, the author argues that instruments which contain commitments are, ex hypothesi, treaties. In doing so, he challenges popular notions proclaiming the existence of morally and politically binding agreements and so-called "soft-law". Such notions, Klabbers argues, are internally inconsistent and founded upon untenable presumptions. Moreover, they find little support in the pertinent decisions of municipal and international courts and tribunals.

THE US AND THE WORLD COURT AS A 'SUPREME COURT OF THE NATIONS'

Dreams, Illusions and Disillusion
by Michla Pomerance

This volume examines in the troubled saga of the U.S. pursuit of the 'Supreme Court of the Nations' idea, from its early pre-World War I origins through the present post-Nicaragua period of U.S. reserve, disillusionment and reassessment. Spurning a 'morality-play' interpretive mold, the author pays particular attention to recurrent themes and the roots of their recurrence; the specific cadences and nuances in the 'grand' and lesser U.S. debates on the Court; the continuities and changes in both partners of the United States-Court relationship; and the various prisms through which that relationship might be viewed. In this manner, the important contemporary debate on the future contours of the U.S.-Court nexus is sharply illuminated.

Internships and Careers in International Law

A Guide for Graduate and Law School Students

Internships and Careers in International Law: A Guide for Graduate and Law School Students is an invaluable resource for any student considering a career in international law.

The Guide features descriptions of over ninety intergovernmental and nongovernmental organizations offering internships to students with an interest in international law or affairs. The Guide also contains twenty Practice Area Summaries, in which individuals active in areas ranging from public international law to space law, share their experiences and offer advice.

International law is a fascinating and dynamic field. However, it is also a highly competitive one and students often have difficulty obtaining the experience they need to build successful careers in the field.

* * * *

The present resurgence of belligerent ethno-nationalism, racism, xenophobia, antisemitism and other forms of prejudice based on ethnic or cultural differences has resulted in flagrant violations of human rights and fundamental freedoms and in violence and conflicts in many parts of the world. The subject of this meeting is thus particularly timely. Migrants, refugees and persons belonging to national or ethnic, religious and linguistic minorities are always among the first victims of such waves of discrimination. In many cases, persons who are trying to escape from discrimination in their countries of origin find themselves faced by new forms of discrimination in their countries of refuge.

TREATY IMPLEMENTATION: SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNICAL ADVICE ENTERS A NEW STAGE

by Lee A. Kimball

Study in Transnational Legal Policy, No. 28, 272 pages.
Published by the American Society of International Law.

This report reviews the development of scientific and technical information and analysis in a selection of international environmental conventions. It considers the contributions of scientific and technical analysis in two stages: before the 1972 Stockholm Conference and from Stockholm to the 1992 Rio Conference on Environment and Development.

The third and current stage of scientific and technical advice is characterized by explicit recognition of the need for socio-economic information and analysis as well as scientific and technical knowledge, and by growing recourse to collective analysis of these issues at the international level. This poses new challenges for convention advisory mechanisms and offers new opportunities to improve the availability of accurate, objective, reliable, and cost-effective advice.

The report explores these implications and then disaggregates six advisory functions as a basis for recommending different institutional options for advice. The institutional implications are particularly important today as the new global conventions shape the roles of their respective advisory bodies and iron out relationships with existing institutions, and as the international community considers major reforms in the post-war international institutions.
