The Soviet Political Agenda Problems and Priorities 1950-1970

By Daniel Tarschys

A study of the political priorities of Soviet leadership in three different years—Stalin's 1950, Khrushchev's 1960, and Brezhnev's 1970. Through systematic comparison of Prauda editorials, Dr. Tarschys maps the changing political agenda in these years and the power groups that generated it. He defines the Kremlin's most pressing concerns, shows how the leaders perceive the political demands of various groups, and traces the emergence and evolution of policy diagnosis and prescriptions.

Studies in Soviet Economic Planning

By Aron Katsenelinboigen

"The author brings to the analysis of the Soviet economy an absolutely unique combination of assets. A pioneer in the development of Soviet mathematical economics, his work provides a penetrating analysis of the structural invariants of the centrally planned economy. And his direct experience with the Soviet economy is the source of a sophisticated interpretation of its economic institutions. This book is a most welcome contribution to the analysis of the Soviet economy."
