Bangwa Kinship and Marriage

ROBERT BRAIN

Robert Brain spent almost two years among the Bangwa, a group of nine Bamileke chiefdoms in that part of West Cameroun which was formerly under British rule. He demonstrates that the double descent system, the complex alliances engendered by marriage and the system of marriage wardships, are rooted in the hard facts of politics and economics.

'He is to be congratulated, not only upon having lit upon a most fascinating people, but also on making very full and intelligent use of his data.'

KENNETH W. J. POST and GEORGE D. JENKINS

An account of de-colonization in Nigeria viewed through the experience of a Nigerian political leader, Adegoke Adelabu. It tells in a highly personal and intriguing way how this Nigerian politician, the 'boss' of Ibadan, operated in the last years of colonial rule.

'...much of the ebullience of this astonishing man [Adelabu] comes through these close pages. For once we have a narrative of colonial politics which accommodates not only the shifting electoral deals at the top but also the little people...'

The Berbers

Their Social and Political Life

ROBERT MONTAGNE

Translated and introduced by David Seddon

Preface by Ernest Gellner

In his study Robert Montagne concerned himself primarily with the Berbers of Morocco where, as a French colonial administrator, he assembled the material on which his book was based. The book, which analyses the political and social aspects of a unique and fiercely independent people, is widely regarded as a social science classic. This is the first ever English translation.

African Studies

GHANA: An Annotated Bibliography of Academic Theses, 1920-1970, in the Commonwealth, the Republic of Ireland and the United States of America

Compiled by Joseph Kofi Kafe. This work is a comprehensive index to research done on Ghana at institutions of higher learning. The publication brings together for the first time detailed information on over 500 theses on a wide variety of subjects which reflect current and historical research on Ghanaian life and customs. Major topics covered include: anthropology, sociology, biological sciences, finance, economics, education, geography, language and literature, the press, history, public administration, and political science. All entries are extensively annotated. Kafe's introductory essay on the development of African studies is a basic guide to the general growth of this discipline in the countries treated.

An Economic History of West Africa

A. G. Hopkins

Dr Hopkins' book is the first work to offer a comprehensive account of the economic history of the huge area known conventionally as West Africa, including the former French territories as well as those colonised by the British, ranging from prehistoric times up to independence in the 1950s and 60s. Dr Hopkins presents an argument, based on the concept of market, that criticises many conventional beliefs about economic backwardness and advances an alternative set of explanations which takes into account, and contributes to, the latest studies in the fields of history, economics, anthropology and geography. This important study not only fills a gap in African studies but also contributes more generally to an understanding of the under-developed world.

Economic Underdevelopment: An Inside View

C. C. Onyemelukwe

This book examines the foundations on which our present ideas of economic development rest, challenging many orthodoxies. It outlines a new theory of economic growth, with particular relevance to developing economies. The author has had wide experience of high level economic planning in Nigeria both at the level of massive capital investment and of improvisation based on largely local resources.

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the businessman, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and, it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
