

Actively Seeking Work?

The Politics of Unemployment and Welfare Policy in the United States and Great Britain

Desmond King

Integrating extensive, previously untapped archival and documentary materials with an analysis of the sources of political support for work-welfare programs, King shows that policymakers in both the United States and Great Britain have tried to achieve conflicting goals through these programs.

“By highlighting the tenacity of traditions in US-UK labour market policy, King will strengthen the doubts of those who believe a public commitment to full employment is little more than an empty political slogan.”—Robert Taylor, The Financial Times

Paper $17.95 352 pages

Honor

Frank Henderson Stewart

Stewart explores Western ideas of honor from diverse times and places and compares them to those of a non-Western society—the Bedouin. He argues that honor must be understood as a right to respect, and shows that by understanding honor this way we can resolve some of the paradoxes that have long troubled scholars.

Authority

Construction and Corrosion

Bruce Lincoln

In this fascinating and intricate analysis, Lincoln offers a telling examination of the performance of authority, and subversions of it, from ancient times to the present.

“A strongly engaging work. . . . Lincoln’s discussions of ‘corrosive speech,’ of the many ways in which the very expectations that authority and authority-relations generate work against authority, are at once masterly and quite moving.”

History Continues

Georges Duby

Translated by Arthur Goldhammer

In this engaging intellectual autobiography, Georges Duby looks back on a career that has led him to be called one of the most distinguished historians in the Western world.

“Beautifully evokes the vocation, craft, and career of one of this century’s outstanding medievalists.”

Studies in American Political Development

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Editors

Karen Orren, University of California, Los Angeles

Stephen Skowronek, Yale University

Studies in American Political Development publishes high quality scholarship covering American political change and institutional development from a historical perspective. Articles focus on government institutions and their social, economic and cultural environment. The journal features in-depth original articles, which allow scholars to elaborate on the complex patterns of state-society relations. These longer articles also encourage an interdisciplinary approach—tying in relevant issues and related themes. In addition, SAPD recognizes the importance of comparative politics to the study of American institutions.

PROGRAM IN AGRARIAN STUDIES YALE UNIVERSITY

The Program in Agrarian Studies at Yale is an experimental, interdisciplinary effort to reshape how a new generation of scholars understands rural life and society. The many hands from many disciplines that have shaped this Program share three premises. The first is that any satisfactory analysis of agrarian development must begin with the lived experience, understandings, and values of its historical subjects. The second premise is that the study of the Third World (and what was, until recently, called the Second World) must never be segregated from the historical study of the West, or the humanities from the social sciences. Finally, we are convinced that the only way to loosen the nearly hegemonic grip of the separate disciplines on how questions are framed and answered is to concentrate on themes of signal importance to several disciplines. By building a sustained community of interdisciplinary conversation and by demonstrating what creative trespassing can accomplish, we hope to set a standard of integrative work that will act as a magnet. The Program began with academic year 1991-92 thanks to support from the Rockefeller Foundation, the Ford Foundation, and Yale University.

COLLOQUIUM SERIES The core of the Program's activities is a weekly colloquium organized around an annual theme. Invited specialists send papers in advance which are the focus of an organized discussion by faculty and graduate students. "Hinterlands, Frontiers, Cities, and States: Transactions and Identities" is our theme for the next two years. This topic would embrace, inter alia, the study of mutual perceptions between countryside and city, and patterns of cultural and material exchange, extraction, migration, credit, legal systems, and political order that link them. It would also include an understanding of how different societies conceive of the spatial order they exhibit. What terms are meaningful and how are they related, e.g. frontier, wilderness, arable, countryside, city, town, agriculture, commerce, 'hills,' lowlands, maritime districts, inland? How have these meanings changed historically and what symbolic and material weight do they bear? We hope the colloquium will become an important audience for the best work on this subject from any historical period, region, or discipline.

PROGRAM FELLOWS The program appoints Research Fellows annually who are in residence for the year, present a paper, and attend the colloquia. Ordinarily, we hope to have four to six Fellows whose diversity reflects the breadth of the program and a Senior Fellow who has already made an important contribution to agrarian studies. Fellows are selected competitively. For information about application procedures and deadlines, write directly to the Program in Agrarian Studies, Box 208300, New Haven, CT 06520-8300, USA.

NATION and MIGRATION

The Politics of Space in the South Asian Diaspora

Edited by Peter van der Veer

This volume explores the complex relationship between South Asian nationalism, migration, ethnicity and the construction of religious identity. Although nationality and diaspora seem to represent opposite ideas and values, van der Veer argues that nationalism is strengthened, even produced by migration. One of the most important answers to emerge from this book is that familiar Western categories are too rigid to contain the experience of the communities studied and that these categories will have to be rethought if we are to understand either the immigrants' construction of group identities or the political manipulation of those identities.

256 pages, 7 illustrations, £31.50 hb, £14.95 pb

THE ROOTS of ETHNICITY

The Origins of the Acholi of Uganda Before 1800

Ronald R. Atkinson

In The Roots of Ethnicity, Atkinson argues that although colonial rule and its aftermath have played a major role in shaping the particular manifestations of ethnicity in Africa, many sociohistorical developments crucial to current expressions of ethnicity can be traced to a past long before the colonial period. Atkinson develops his argument through an exhaustive examination of the origins of the collective identity of the Acholi of present-day northern Uganda. 288 pages, 25 illustrations, £32.95 hb

AUTONOMY and POWER

The Dynamics of Class and Culture in Rural Bolivia

Maria L. Lagos

In Autonomy and Power, Lagos supplies a fine-grained ethnographic and historical analysis of the intersecting dynamics of class and culture in Tiraque, a province in the highlands of Cochabamba, Bolivia. By focusing on the changing conditions of production that give rise to and shape class relations, Lagos traces the formation of a land-owning peasantry and its social counterpart, an emergent, dominant group of merchants and transporters who rely on practices and ideologies of community, reciprocity, and fictive kinship to consolidate their hold over production and exchange. 192 pages, £36.95 hb, £13.95 pb

Urbanization and Crime

Germany 1871-1914

Eric A. Johnson

Arguing that cities do not cause crime, this book focuses on crime during Germany's period of most rapid growth. From 1871-1914, German cities, despite massive growth, were not particularly crime-infested. Nevertheless, governmental authorities often overreacted against city populations.

Democracy and Authoritarianism in South Asia

A Comparative and Historical Perspective

Ayesha Jalal

Challenging the view that a shared colonial legacy led to contrasting patterns of political development in South Asia, this analysis argues that, despite differences in form, central political authority in each state has confronted similar threats.

COMPARATIVE STUDIES IN SOCIETY AND HISTORY

ISSN 0010-4175

Founded by Sylvia L. Thrupp

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical, or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, 102 Rackham Building, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109-1070.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
