John Hamilton was born in Berkshire in October 1943, just a few miles away from where he died. In the interim he achieved much. He had the privilege of a Scottish education through school and university. He completed important research, followed a distinguished clinical career and contributed substantially to the Royal College of its consolidation. She survives him with their two fine sons. This year he formalised his second marriage to Henrietta Bullard, who was his greatest support over the last few years. In the last nine months of his life, John was aware of his likely death sentence but nevertheless fought, not only to live, but also to continue a significant contribution to the subject he loved. He was leading the launch of research into the real security needs of patients in the special (maximum security) hospitals. In his last week he had arranged a meeting with his closest research colleagues, sadly that meeting never took place: he died on 2 June 1990.

The importance of his work outlives him. It lives in his students, from a wide range of disciplines, to whom he was a wise teacher. It lives in his wider academic contribution, writing and reviewing for
