

Fung Global Fellows Program

Princeton University is pleased to announce the call for applications to the Fung Global Fellows Program at the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies (PIIRS). Each year the program selects six scholars from around the world to be in residence at Princeton for an academic year and to engage in research and discussion around a common theme. Fellowships are awarded to scholars employed outside the United States who are expected to return to their positions, and who have demonstrated outstanding scholarly achievement and exhibit unusual intellectual promise but who are still early in their careers.

During the academic year 2014/15, the theme for the Fung Global Fellows Program will be “Global Diffusion.” The program seeks applications from scholars developing new, innovative ways to study global diffusion processes. The objects of diffusion could be specific modes of social categorization (such as “race” in census forms), principles of legitimation (such as democracy), government policies (such as minority quota systems) forms of conflict (such as revolutions), or cultural practices (such as Tango dancing or marrying “in white”). We especially encourage analytically oriented approaches that identify recurring patterns and mechanisms through rigorous comparison of multiple cases or quantitative analysis, with broad geographic (preferably transcontinental) coverage. Researchers working on all historical periods of the modern age, all regions of the world and of all disciplinary backgrounds in the social sciences and humanities are encouraged to apply.

Applications are due on November 1, 2013. To be eligible, applicants must have received their Ph.D. (or equivalent) no earlier than September 1, 2004. Fellowships will be awarded on the strength of a candidate’s proposed research project, the relationship of the project to the program’s theme, the candidate’s scholarly record, and the candidate’s ability to contribute to the intellectual life of the program. For more information on eligibility requirements and the application process itself, see the program’s website at <http://www.princeton.edu/funggf/>

Princeton University is an equal opportunity employer and complies with applicable EEO and affirmative action regulations.

World Politics* Announces
Visiting Fellow for 2013–14

Tulia Falleti, an associate professor of political science and a senior fellow in the Leonard Davis Institute for Health Economics at the University of Pennsylvania, has been named World Politics Visiting Fellow for the academic year 2013–14. Her position is effective September 1.

Falleti's research interests in comparative politics focus on Latin America, historical institutionalism, and community participation, with an emphasis in the health sector. While at Princeton, she will work on a book project on participatory democracy and citizenship in Latin America and, as a coeditor, on The Oxford Handbook of Historical Institutionalism.

The fellowship is funded by World Politics and hosted by the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies. For more information, visit the World Politics Web site at www.princeton.edu/piirs/worldpolitics-journal.
