

Award Recipients

at Columbia University, summer 1989.

George Romoser, Kobe University, Japan, during 1988-89.

Award Recipients

1988-89 American Fulbright Scholars

Each year about 1,000 Americans are awarded Fulbright grants to lecture or conduct research abroad. About 60% of the awards are for university lecturing, and many include opportunities for research.

The following scholars were chosen in the fields of political science and public administration. Each entry includes name of the grantee, academic rank, home institution, grant activity, host institution and country, and grant duration. There is also a listing of political scientists in special programs.

Political Science

George E. Agree, director, department of international development, U.S. Association of Former Members of Congress. Lecturing in Political Science (Seminar on Modern Parliament and Democracy): Fulbright Commission, Buenos Aires, Argentina. Week, April 1988.

Gabriel A. Almond, professor, department of political science, Stanford University. Lecturing on Status and Tendencies of Political Science in the United States: Kiev State University, Kiev, U.S.S.R. Four months, February 1989-June 1989.

Peter Bachrach, professor, department of political science, Temple University. Lecturing on Theories of Democracy: From Democratic Elitism to Participatory: University of Bombay and Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India. Nine months, August 1988-May 1989.

Davis Bernard Bobrow, professor, department of government and politics, University of Maryland, College Park. Research on the Japanese Pursuit of National Security: Saitama University, Tokyo, Japan. Nine months, July 1988-March 1989.

Gloria Jennien Braxton, associate professor, department of political science, Southern University. Lecturing on Rural Women and Economic Development: Cuttington University College, Suacoco, Liberia. Twelve months, July 1988-July 1989.

John Creighton Campbell, associate professor, department of political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Research on the Cost-Containment Issue and Japanese Health Care Policy: Affiliation to be determined; Tokyo, Japan. Nine months, September 1988-May 1989.

Michael R. Curtis, professor, department of political science, Rutgers University, New Brunswick. Lecturing on Comparative Politics Bologna Chair in Political Science: University of Bologna, Bologna, Italy. Three months, January 1989-March 1989.

Neal Evan Cutler, professor, department of political science and gerontology, University of Southern California, Los Angeles. Research on Public Opinion and Knowledge of Alzheimer's Disease in the United Kingdom and the United States: University of Glasgow, Glasgow, United Kingdom. Four months, September 1988-December 1988.

Jorge Ignacio Dominguez, professor, department of government, Harvard University. Lecturing in Political Science: El Colegio de Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico. Three months, June 1988-September 1988.

Rosemary E. Galli, professor, department of social sciences, Wartburg College. Lecturing on International Relations: University of the Azores, Institute for the Social Sciences, Ponta Delgada, and University of Lisbon, Lisbon, Portugal. Six months, October 1988-April 1989.

Joyce Gelb, professor, department of political science, CUNY, City College. Lecturing on U.S. Political Issues: El Colegio de Mexico, Mexico City, Mexico. One month, June 1988-July 1988.

Larry N. George, assistant professor, department of political science, University of New Mexico. Lecturing on Interamerican Relations: Visits to various institutions; Bogota, Colombia. Five months, March 1988-August 1988.

Mark Patrick Gibney, professor, department of political science, Purdue University. Research on Human Rights and Refugees: University of Oslo, Oslo, Norway. Nine months, September 1988-June 1989.

George Morley Guess, assistant professor, institute of public administration, Georgia State University. Research on Comparative Forestry Policy Performance in Central America: National University, Heredia, Costa Rica. Four months, June 1988-October 1988. (Central American Republics Research Program)

Nand E. Hart-Nibbrig, professor, department of public affairs, George Mason University. Lecturing and Research on American Government and Politics: University of Papua New Guinea, Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea. Three months, May 1988-August 1988.

James Heaphey, director, development studies center, Nelson Rockefeller College. Lecturing on Public Administration and Legislative Issues: Fulbright Commission, Santiago, Chile. Two weeks, June 1988.

John James MacDougall, associate professor, department of political science, University of Alabama, Huntsville. Lecturing and Research on Construction of a New Theoretical Bureaucratic Political Model for Analyzing Southeast Asian Studies: University of Indonesia, Jakarta, Indonesia. Six months, July 1988-December 1988.

Gregory S. Mahler, associate professor, department of political science, University of Vermont. Research on Legislative Policymaking in the Caribbean: Criteria for Decision-Making in Social Policy; Multi-country. Six months, June 1988-December 1988. (American Republics Research Program)

James Bruce Mayfield, professor, department of political science, University of Utah. Lecturing on Comparative Local Government Studies in the Middle East: Tel Aviv University, Tel Aviv, Israel. Five months, February 1989-July 1989.

Peter J. McDonough, professor, department of political science, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Research on Catholicism in a Crossnational Perspective: European Jesuits and Social Reform; Western European Regional Research Program: Spain, France, Ireland. Six months, January 1989-July 1989.

Carol Anne Mershon, visiting assistant professor, department of government and center for European studies, Harvard University. Research on Building the Left: Postwar Party Strategies in Four Italian Settings; University of Milan, Milan, Italy. Six months, between September 1988-June 1989.

Laurie Ann Mylroie, assistant professor, department of government, Harvard University. Research on the U.S. and the Arab-Israeli Conflict: A New Perspective; Tel Aviv University, Tel Aviv, Israel. Nine months, October 1988-July 1989.

Walter J. Oleszek, specialist, Congressional Research Service, Library of Congress. Lecturing in Political Science: Fulbright Commission, Buenos Aires, Argentina. One week, April 1988.

David L. Paletz, professor, department of political science, Duke University. Lecturing and Research on Political Communication and Public Opinion: University of Leiden, Leiden, Netherlands. Four and one-half months, January 1989-June 1989.

John A. Peeler, professor, department of political science, Bucknell University. Lecturing and Research on Democracy and Democratization in Central America: University of Costa Rica, San Jose, Costa Rica. Eleven months, July 1988-June 1989.

Christopher Howland Pyle, professor, department of politics, Mount Holyoke College. Lecturing in Political Science: Universidad Complutense de Madrid, Madrid, Spain. Three months, January 1989-April 1989.

People in Political Science

Robert L. Rau, professor and chairman, department of political science, U.S. Naval Academy. Research on Obstacles to Defense Coalition: Building in the Asia-Pacific Region; Australian Defense Studies Center, Canberra, Australia. Twelve months, July 1988-July 1989.

Tom Nestore Rogers, lecturer, department of government and international relations, California State University, Sacramento. Lecturing and Research on American Government and Foreign Policy: Quaid-i-Azam University, Islamabad, Pakistan. Nine months, October 1988-July 1989.

Leo Eugene Rose, adjunct professor, department of political science, University of California, Berkeley. Research on Modern Kashmir: A Political and Social History; University of Azad Jammu and Kashmir, Muzaffarabad, Pakistan. Five months, January 1989-June 1989.

Bruce Martin Russett, professor, department of political science, Yale University. Research on Democracy and National Security Policy: Tel Aviv University, Tel Aviv, Israel. Nine months, October 1988-July 1989.

Dan C. Sanford, professor, department of history and political studies, Whitworth College. Lecturing and Research on Impact of Pacific Basin Community Trade and Community Links on Changing Foreign Relations Attitude: Affiliation to be determined; Seoul, Korea. Four months, August 1988-December 1988.

Edward V. Schten, professor, department of governmental affairs, University of Wisconsin, Madison. Research in Public Administration: University of the Republic, Montevideo, Uruguay. Six weeks, July 1988-September 1988.

Jerome Slater, professor, department of political science, SUNY, Buffalo. Lecturing on International Politics and American Foreign Policy: University of Haifa, Haifa, Israel. Five months, February 1989-July 1989.

Mauricio Solaun, professor, department of Latin American sociology, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. Research on

Alienation Without Breakdown in an Unstable Democracy: Multicountry. (American Republics Research Program)

Carolyn Marie Somerville, assistant professor, department of political science, CUNY, Hunter College. Research on Economic Crisis and Political Democracy in Senegal: University of Dakar, Dakar, Senegal. Five months, October 1988-March 1989. (African Regional Research Program)

Shannon Colleen Stimson, assistant professor, department of government, Harvard University. Lecturing in Comparative Anglo-American Studies: University of Sussex, Sussex, United Kingdom. Ten months, September 1988-June 1989.

Ezra N. Suleiman, professor, department of politics, Princeton University. Research on Public Sector Reform and Privatization in France and Britain; Western European Regional Research Program: France, United Kingdom. Ten months, September 1988-July 1989.

Robert H. Trudeau, associate professor, department of political science, Providence College. Lecturing on U.S. Political System: University of Buenos Aires and University of Belgrano, Buenos Aires, Argentina. Three months, August 1988-October 1988.

Franz A. Von Sauer, associate professor, department of political science, Oklahoma State University. Lecturing and Research on Comparative Politics and U.S.-Latin American Relations: Central University, Caracas, Venezuela. Ten months, September 1988-July 1989.

Donald Emery Weatherbee, professor, department of government and international studies, University of South Carolina. Lecturing and Research on American Foreign Policy: Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok, Thailand. Ten months, August 1988-May 1989.

Richard Lee Wilson, associate professor, department of political science, University of Tennessee. Lecturing on American Government: Beijing University, Beijing, People's Republic of China. Eleven months, September 1988-August 1989.

Public Administration

Donald J. Calista, associate professor, department of public administration, Marist College. Lecturing on Postmaterialism: Convergence and Divergence in Japan; Hiroshima University, Hiroshima, Japan. Ten months, April 1989-January 1990.

Jesse Casaus, clerk, United States District Court, District of New Mexico. Lecturing and Consulting on Court Management: Ministry of Justice and University of Costa Rica, San Jose, Costa Rica. Three months, December 1988-March 1989.

Terry Lee Cooper, associate professor, school of public administration, University of Southern California. Lecturing in Public Administration and Political Science: Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong. Ten months, September 1988-July 1989.

Arthur A. Goldsmith, assistant professor, department of management, University of Massachusetts. Research on Development of Agricultural Research Capability in India and Nigeria: The G.B. Pant Krishi Vishwavidyalaya, Pantnagar, Uttar Pradesh, India. Three months, May 1989-August 1989. (Indo-American Fellowship Program)

Daniel Howard Henning, professor, department of sociology and political science, Eastern Montana College. Research on Issues and Values Relating to Tropical Forest Administration and Training in Thailand: Kasetsart University, Bangkok, Thailand. Ten months, July 1988-April 1989. (Southeast Asian Regional Research Program)

Norman Earl Holly, economist, National Center for Health Services Research, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services. Lecturing on International Relations and Political Economy: University of Papua New Guinea, Port Moresby, Papua New Guinea. Twelve months, July 1988-July 1989.

Gerald F. Murphy, associate professor, Institute of Public Service International, University of Connecticut. Consulting on Computer Applications in Municipal Budget and Finance: Ministry of Interior, Abidjan, Cote d'Ivoire. Three months, June 1988-August 1988.

L. Craig Parker, Jr., professor, department of public management, University of New Haven. Research on Parole and Community-Based Approaches to Offenders in Finland and the United States: Ministry of Justice, Helsinki, Finland. Two to four months, between September 1988-June 1989.

Stanley Vanagurias, professor, department of political science, Arkansas State University. Lecturing on Administration of Criminal Justice in the United States: Vilnius State University, Vilnius, U.S.S.R. Four months, February 1989-June 1989.

Robert E. Wong, senior budget examiner, Executive Department, New York State Division of Budget. Lecturing on Practical Public Policy Analysis and Fiscal Administration: University of Guyana, Georgetown, Guyana. Nine months, September 1988-June 1989.

NATO Advanced Research Fellowships

Wallace J. Thies, associate professor, department of politics, Catholic University of America: Research on the Politics of Integration in the Atlantic Alliance.

Seminar on German Civilization and Society (Landeskunde), June-July 1988

Stephen Eric Bronner, associate professor, department of political science, Rutgers University-New Brunswick.

Darril Hudson, professor, department of political science, California State University-Hayward.

Fulbright Awards for Graduate Students

Following are the names of U.S. graduate students in political science who have received Fulbright awards for

People in Political Science

1988-89, with their U.S. institutions and the countries in which they will study.

Margarita Balmaceda, Princeton U.: Argentina.

Coeli Barry, Cornell U.: Philippines.

Jon D. Boles, Davidson College: West Germany.

Daniel E. Caul, Vanderbilt U.: Colombia.

John Cotman, Boston U.: Grenada.

Mark Ensalaco, State U. of New York at Buffalo: Colombia.

Daniel Goldhagen, Harvard U.: West Germany.

Daniel Green, Indiana U.: Ghana.

Paul Haber, Columbia U.: Mexico.

Arun Kapil, U. of Chicago: Algeria.

Roger Karapin, Massachusetts Institute of Technology: West Germany.

Susan Scarrow, Yale U.: West Germany.

Douglas Selvage, Macalester College: West Germany.

Jason T. Shaplen, Johns Hopkins U.: Philippines.

Mina Silberberg, U. of California at Berkeley: Venezuela.

Paula Spencer, Michigan State U.: West Germany.

Jill Teutsh, Brown U.: West Germany.

Michael Veatch, Texas A&M U.: West Germany.

Christopher Whann, U. of Wisconsin at Madison: Lesotho.

Deborah Yashar, U. of California at Berkeley: Guatemala.

Gerald R. Ford Foundation

The following political scientists, listed with their affiliations and topics, were awarded grants in 1988 by the Gerald R. Ford Foundation.

Bruce E. Altschuler, associate professor,

SUNY-Oswego, on polls and decisions in the Ford Administration.

Stephan Bierling, doctoral candidate, University of Munich, on presidential-congressional relations in foreign policy making, 1974-89.

Matthew Dickinson, doctoral student, Harvard University, on "The President's Senior Staff: Personalities and Experiences, 1945-88."

Steven Livingston, assistant professor, SUNY-Albany, on the making of U.S. foreign economic policy toward the Third World.

Janet M. Martin, assistant professor, Bowdoin College, on "Women Who Govern: An Examination of Presidential Appointments."

Roger K. Smith, Olin Fellow, Center for Science and International Affairs-Harvard University, "The United States and the Non-Proliferation Regime: A Study in Government Learning."

Southwestern Political Science Association

Best paper awards were presented to the following people at the 1988 annual meeting of the Southwestern Political Science Association.

Pi Sigma Alpha Best Paper Award, 1987 Convention: Allen Brierly and Richard Feiock, University of Miami, "Explaining State Economic Growth Rates: Common Interest Accumulation and Subsystem Politics."

SWPSA Best Paper Award, 1987 Convention: David Billeaux, Oklahoma State University, "Public Employees Group Characteristics, Activities, and Effectiveness in the Labor Relations Process."

Best Graduate Student Paper Award: Barry Smith, North Texas State University, "The Cost of Participation and the Role of the Bureaucracy in a Democracy."

Best Undergraduate Paper Award: co-presented to Michael Fossen, Arizona State University, "Is Membership in Congress a Conduit for Wealth?" and Craig Arnold, University of Kansas, "Aid to the Homeless: Formulating Public Welfare Policy in the Age of Self-Interest."

U.S. Institute of Peace

Jennings Randolph Program

The U.S. Institute of Peace has announced the selection of 11 Fellows in its Jennings Randolph Program for International Peace. Most of the recipients will work out of the Program's headquarters at the Institute's Washington, D.C. office. The following political scientists are among the Peace Fellows, persons whose careers demonstrate substantial accomplishment and promise of future leadership.

Raymond Cohen, Senior Lecturer, Hebrew University, Jerusalem. Cohen will complete a book on the impact of intercultural communication difficulties on U.S. negotiations with other countries.

Lily Gardner Feldman, associate professor, Tufts University. Feldman will examine how former enemies of war have developed close ties of friendship, by looking at Germany's postwar reconciliation with Israel, France, and the United States.

Ted Robert Gurr, professor, University of Colorado. Gurr will study why certain nations historically seem prone to violent behavior while others are inclined toward nonviolent means for resolving problems.

Robin Ranger, Arms Control Analyst, Washington, D.C. Ranger will develop effective and workable safeguards to ensure compliance with Strategic Arms Reductions Talks (START) and other proposed arms control agreements.

Grants Program

In the unsolicited grants category, 43 awards were made in the period of March through September 1988. The following awards have been given to political scientists and to institutions for projects headed by political scientists.

American University (Abdul Aziz Said, Professor, School of International Service, Project Director): A one-year partial support grant to allow the university to continue its Peace and Conflict Resolution concentration under the Washington Semester undergraduate study and internship program. $23,333 (USIP 416).

LILY GARDNER FELDMAN

Atlantic Council of the United States, Washington, D.C. (John A. Baker, Director of Education, Project Director): A one-year grant to assist the Atlantic Council in researching, developing, and testing two new crisis management decision-making simulations (in addition to those developed previously under USIP 008) focusing on the NATO alliance. $30,000 (USIP 469).

Dartmouth College (Ian Lustick, Project Director): A one-year partial support grant to permit Lustick to complete a book analyzing the potential for change in Israel's relationship to the West Bank and Gaza Strip. $15,000 (USIP 392).

University of Hawaii Institute for Peace (Caroline Stephenson, Project Director): A one-year partial support grant to support a curriculum and "training for peace" program. $12,500 (USIP 050).

Donald L. Horowitz, professor of law, public policy studies, and political science,

People in Political Science

Duke University: An 18-month partial support grant to permit Horowitz to complete a book on inter-ethnic conflict, focusing on "the deadly ethnic riot" as a prelude to international conflict. $25,000 (USIP 406).

Massachusetts Institute of Technology (Nazli Choucri, Project Director): A two-year partial grant to complete a book on the determinants of international conflict in shaping activities of states and influencing propensities to conflict and warfare. $56,000 (USIP 497).

New York University (Steven Brams, Project Director): A one-year partial support grant of a book-length manuscript enabling Brams to study three sequential bargaining procedures—by way of analytic techniques and computer simulations—in order to establish a "zone of agreement" between and among opposing bargainers. $26,595 (USIP 362).

Northwestern University, Center for International Studies and Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research (Jack A. Goldstone, Ted Robert Gurr, and Farrokh Moshiri, Project Directors): A one-year partial support grant to permit Goldstone, Gurr, and Moshiri to complete a book of essays by area specialists dealing with the relationship between war and revolution in the late 20th century. $24,000 (USIP 387).

University of Michigan (J. David Singer, Ann Arbor): A 16-month partial support grant for a book-length manuscript on the testing of the hypothesis that at the close of most major wars there occurs a relatively well-ordered hierarchy of major powers, with one or two in positions of clear dominance. Yet, this rank order deteriorates over a period of some decades, and the declining powers often find themselves in another major conflict. $32,000 (USIP 464).

Salzburg Seminar, Cambridge, MA (Lloyd Cutler and Roger Lort, Project Directors): A 36-month partial support grant for student scholarships and costs of publication of proceedings for a series of three annual two-week sessions on negotiation theory and practice. $25,000 (USIP 477).

School of Advanced International Studies, The Johns Hopkins University (I. William Zartman, Project Director): A two-year partial support grant to permit a team of researchers under the direction of Zartman to produce 1) an article- or monograph-length study on the basic theoretical mechanisms of negotiation; 2) an article- or monograph-length study on the operative effects and timing of leverage in negotiations; 3) a series of articles on the special problem of multilateral negotiations; and 4) a computerized guide to negotiations. $50,000 (USIP 293).

Joshua Sinai, Washington, D.C.: A one-year partial support grant toward the completion of a monograph on the capacity of moderate regimes in El Salvador, the Philippines, Sri Lanka, India, Israel, and the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland to respond peacefully to challenges posed by violent opposition movements. $25,000 (USIP 456).

Raymond Tanter, Michigan State University: A six-month partial support grant which will enable Tanter to examine, in an essay, the more salient issues in the area of arms control negotiation. Particularly, he will focus on the relative efficacy of formal treaties versus tacit understandings. $6,383 (USIP 106).

Whittier College (Project Director, Joyce Kaufman): A grant for 18 months in support of Whittier's International Negotiation Project. The project is a three-phase, dual-track program designed to educate participants—at university and secondary-school levels as well as in workshops for the community at large—in the complexities of international negotiations and to generate research on negotiations. $53,820 (USIP 397).

Howard Wiarda, the American Enterprise Institute, Washington, D.C.: A one-year grant to permit a noted professor of Latin American Studies to examine the interrelationships among peace, democracy and development in Latin America. Specifically, Wiarda will study the effects of the Democracy—and the National Endowment for Democracy—Projects, foreign assistance programs and their impact on economic and political freedom, and the effects of human rights policy in general. $29,300 (USIP 205).

Other Awards and Honors

Carl Q. Christol, professor emeritus of international law and political science, University of Southern California, has been named a Centennial Alumnus for the state of South Dakota for representing South Dakota public higher education with great distinction.

Jonathan F. Galloway has been named to the Irvin L. and Fern D. Young Presidential Professorship of Politics, Lake Forest College.

David K. Hart, J. Fish Smith Professor of Free Enterprise Studies, Graduate School of Management, and a member of the Public Management Faculty, Brigham Young University, has been awarded the annual Karl G. Maeser Research and Creative Arts Award for Faculty.

Douglas A. Hibbs, Jr., Trade Union Institute for Economic Research, has been granted approximately one million Swedish crowns by the Government of Sweden in support of his research on "The Fiscal System, Wage Formation and Wage Dispersion Under Solidarity Bargaining."

DAVID K. HART

Max M. Kampelman, Head, U.S. Delegation for Negotiations on Nuclear and Space Arms, and Counselor of the U.S. Department of State, received the Jit Trainor Award in October 1988.

Theodore J. Lowi, John L. Senior Pro-

CARL Q. CHRISTOL

THEODORE J. LOWI

People in Political Science

essor of American Institutions at Cornell University, has been named a Gold Medal winner in a national professor-of-the-year program sponsored by the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education.

Gregory Markus, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, received the Amoco Good Teaching Award from the University of Michigan, October 1988.

Ali Mazrui, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, received the AFRICARE Distinguished Service Award for "Outstanding Contribution to the American Awareness of Africa," in June 1988. In October, he received the Distinguished Faculty Achievement Award from the University of Michigan.

Roger B. Porter, Harvard University, has been elected a Fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration.

Donald L. Robinson, Smith College, has been appointed a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar for 1988-89.

Leonardo A. Villalon, Ph.D. candidate in government at University of Texas at Austin, has received a doctoral research fellowship for Africa by the Social Science Research Council for an examination of the political roles of Islam in the articulation of patterns of state-civil society relations in the Sine-Saloum region of Senegal. His research is also partially funded by a Fulbright-Hays Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad Grant.

In Memoriam

William T. R. Fox

William T. R. Fox, Bryce professor emeritus of Columbia University, suffered a heart attack in August and died at Greenwich Hospital on October 24, 1988, at the age of 76.

Bill, as I know he would want to be called, was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Haverford College and earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Chicago. He taught at Temple, Princeton, and Yale before joining Columbia's faculty in 1950. Appointed director of the Institute of War and Peace Studies in 1951 by Dwight D. Eisenhower, then President of Columbia, Bill remained the director for 25 years.

Bill coined the term "super-powers" and in 1944 published a book with that title. Among his other books were the American Study of International Relations (1967) and A Continent Apart: The United States and Canada (1985). In 1967, he and his wife, Annette Baker Fox, published NATO and the Range of American Choice. He was also co-author, editor of, and contributor to other books. His many articles ranged widely across the subject matter of international relations, from the United Nations, to foreign and military policy, to science and technology.

A fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, at times a consultant to the State Department, a member of the international staff at the 1945 United Nations Conference in San Francisco, a former president of the International Studies Association, Bill was a visiting faculty member at Harvard, Carleton, and Toronto universities and at universities in Australia, Mexico, and Brazil. He lectured at the National War College and the colleges of the Army, Navy, and Air Force. He was the first managing editor of World Politics, which quickly became the foremost journal in its field. He introduced the commissioning of review articles for that journal in a form that endures to this day. He was also a founding editor of International Organization.

Throughout the postwar years, Bill was at the creative center of the developing field of international relations. As a graduate student, he was research assistant to Quincy Wright when he was writing his monumental Study of War. The Super-Powers inaugurated the influential series of Yale's Institute of International Studies. He was a contributor to the pioneering book co-authored and edited by Bernard Brodie, The Absolute Weapon (1946). Gabriel Almond, brought to the Institute by Bill, credits him with recruiting Brodie, Klaus Knorr, William Kaufman, and Bernard Cohen for the Institute. To Columbia's Institute he brought a number of young scholars, among them Glenn Sny-