MILITARY INSTITUTIONS and the SOCIOLOGY of WAR

A Review of the Literature with Annotated Bibliography

by KURT LANG, State University of New York, Stony Brook

This volume, both text and bibliography, present an overview of the sociological literature on military affairs. The field covers all those situations and structures where the element of organized violence constitutes a major and legitimate preoccupation—be it as a readily available means to some shared objective or as a potential last resort against attacks on the social order.

The bibliography—which contains over 1,300 items—lists books, monographs, articles, etc., by author under subject headings. Cross-listing is provided where items clearly cut across the artificial boundaries set up. An exhaustive listing of relevant materials, both published and fugitive.

POLICY: The Journal of Interamerican Studies and World Affairs reflects the interests of the scholarly community and interested public concerned with the social, economic, political, and cultural aspects of life in Latin America (including the Caribbean); particularly in those instances where the subject is of concern to more than one of the traditional disciplines. As these concerns change, so will the content of the journal. ¶ Articles which have special relevance for interrelationships between American nations and of those nations with the rest of the world will be given special consideration. An effort will be made to include occasional articles that state an unusual or even discordant position on a subject of broad interest to be supplemented by critical comments of authorities representing differing positions on the topic. The editors continue to welcome articles by scholars from all parts of the world.
