

Toft Named World Politics
Visiting Fellow for 2015–16

Monica Duffy Toft, a professor of government and public policy at the Blavatnik School of Government at the University of Oxford, has been named the 2015–16 World Politics visiting fellow. The fellowship is funded by World Politics and hosted by the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies at Princeton University.

Toft, who is also a supernumerary fellow at Brasenose College at Oxford; a global scholar of the Peace Research Institute Oslo; and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, the Minorities at Risk Advisory Board, and the Political Instability Task Force, has published widely on civil wars, territory and nationalism, and demography and religion in global politics. Her most recent books include Securing the Peace (2011); Political Demography, coauthored with Jack Goldstone and Eric Kaufmann (2012); and God's Century, coauthored with Daniel Philpott and Timothy Shah (2012).

Fung Global Fellows Program

Princeton University is pleased to announce the call for applications to the Fung Global Fellows Program at the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies (PIIRS). Each year the program selects six scholars from around the world to be in residence at Princeton for an academic year and to engage in research and discussion around a common theme. Fellowships are awarded to scholars employed outside the United States who are expected to return to their positions, and who have demonstrated outstanding scholarly achievement and exhibit unusual intellectual promise but who are still early in their careers.

During the academic year 2016/17, the theme for the Fung Global Fellows Program will be “International Society: Institutions and Actors in Global Governance.” The growth of international organizations and transnational actors has brought about the emergence of a dense international society above the nation-state. Under what circumstances do new international organizations or transnational associations emerge, and when do they expand in their membership and jurisdiction? Does international society function as a constraint on states? How do states and societal actors navigate the complex and overlapping jurisdictions of international organizations? In what ways do international organizations and associations function as distinct cultures or as bureaucracies with their own interests? This year’s cohort of Fung fellows will examine the emergence, functioning, and effects of international organizations and transnational associations of all types (state and non-state, focused on a single issue or world region, or examined comparatively) from a cultural, historical, political, sociological, or other perspective. Researchers working on any historical period or region of the world and from any disciplinary background in the humanities and social sciences are encouraged to apply.

Applications are due on November 1, 2015. To be eligible, applicants must have received their Ph.D. (or equivalent) no earlier than September 1, 2006. Fellowships will be awarded on the strength of a candidate’s proposed research project, the relationship of the project to the program’s theme, the candidate’s scholarly record, and the candidate’s ability to contribute to the intellectual life of the program. For more information on eligibility requirements and the application process itself, see the program’s website at <http://www.princeton.edu/funggfp/>

Princeton University is an equal opportunity employer. All qualified applicants will receive consideration for employment without regard to race, color, religion, sex, national origin, disability status, protected veteran status, or any other characteristic protected by law.
