Origins of the Chinese Revolution 1915—1949

Lucien Bianco

Translated by Muriel Bell

'The best analysis that we have in such brief compass, not merely because it is the most recent, but primarily because it is the most comprehensive, critical, and balanced.'—Journal of Asian Studies Paper covers £1.50

The Cult of the Dead in a Chinese Village

Emily M. Ahern

This book shows that a reflection of the basic design of society in Ch'ian, a village in northern Taiwan, can be seen in its complex and all-pervasive form of ancestor worship. Not only does the cult serve as a kind of code for the relationships between the living and the dead, but it displays the geographical articulation of the four-lineage community and the social and political divisions within it. Moreover, it is expressive of the villagers' world view—their ideals and their sense of what is likely and what is possible. Illustrated £5 Stanford

The Chinese Short Story

Studies in Dating, Authorship, and Composition

Patrick Hanan

Early Chinese vernacular fiction was never adequately preserved. The great popular appeal of the short stories saved them from oblivion, but it was only in the 16th and 17th centuries that they were first collected and published. This book shows how the genre developed in China, what kind of men composed it, its relationship to other kinds of Chinese literature, and the main social themes with which it deals. £6 Harvard

The History of Imperial China

A Research Guide

This guide covers a time span from the earliest periods to c.1911 but concentrates on the sources and research aids for the study of imperial China from the 3rd century B.C. to the 18th century A.D. It assumes a knowledge of classical Chinese, modern Chinese, and modern Japanese, but wherever possible translations into Western languages or Western-language aids have been included. Paper covers £2.25 Harvard

An Estimate of the Land-Tax Collection in China 1753 and 1908

Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, together with a duplicate copy, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing and, preferably, conform to the styling of The China Quarterly.

The China Quarterly is published by the Contemporary China Institute of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the Contemporary China Institute.

IASP Translation Journals in Asian Studies

IASP translation journals offer English translations of significant articles from periodicals and books published in the country indicated. The materials are selected by authorities in the given field and are translated in full. All journals are quarterly.

"The translations [in the IASP Asian Series] are accurate, free of any tampering or bias. The selection seems objective, and an effort is made to devote a given issue to a central problem. . . . The emphasis is on translation of material which has lasting value for research."
—Library Journal

"I find Chinese Studies in History valuable because of its broad approach and interesting coverage of historical questions, seen mostly through Chinese eyes. . . . I read each issue with great interest and think other scholars will find much of value in it also."
—C. Martin Wilbur, Columbia University

"Japanese Economic Studies is an invaluable aid to students of Japanese economic affairs, especially those who lack ready access to authoritative Japanese studies because of lack of language facility or library resources."—William W. Lockwood, Princeton University
