

Justice Walter V. Schaefer of the Illinois Supreme Court gave the annual James Lecture on government at the University of Illinois, February 10, 1959. His topic was "Courts and the Commonplaces of Federalism."

Leonard Schapiro of the London School of Economics will be at Columbia University as visiting professor of government during the fall term, during John Hazard's sabbatical leave.

Karl Schmitt, assistant professor of government at the University of Texas will serve as visiting lecturer in history at the University of California at Los Angeles during the summer session of 1959.

Dwight J. Simpson, assistant professor of political science at Williams College has received a Social Science Research Council grant for study at the Near and Middle East Institute at Columbia University during the summer of 1959.

J. David Singer has been reappointed visiting assistant professor of political science at the University of Michigan for the academic year 1959-60.

Frank J. Sorauf, of the Pennsylvania State University, has been granted leave the second semester to conduct research under a grant for research in state politics from the Social Science Research Council.

George W. Spicer, is serving as consultant to the Commission on Civil Rights. He was on partial leave from the University of Virginia during the spring semester. He will teach at the summer session of the University of Buffalo as visiting professor in the department of history and government.

Paul G. Steinbicker, chairman of the government department of St. Louis University, has been elected president of the Missouri Political Science Association for the year 1958-1959.

Richard N. Swift, associate professor at New York University, has been appointed visiting lecturer in political science at Yale University for the academic year 1958-59.

John S. Vanderoef from Princeton University will be lecturer in the political science department at Florida State University for the Spring Semester 1959.

John A. Vieg, professor of government at the Claremont Graduate School, was visiting research professor of political science at the University of California (Berkeley) during the past year. He is doing research on the role of pressure groups in California state politics.

John C. Wahlke of Vanderbilt University was visiting associate professor of political science at the University of California (Berkeley) during the 1958-59 academic year.

Myron Weiner of the department of political science at the University of Chicago has been appointed assistant editor of the Journal of Asian Studies. He will be in charge of South Asian articles submitted to the journal.

Lloyd M. Wells, associate professor, department of political science, school of business and public administration, University of Missouri, succeeds W. W. Kaempfer, formerly of Southern Methodist University, now of the University of Alabama, as an associate editor in charge of public administration on the staff of Background on World Politics.

York Willbern, professor of government and director of the bureau of government research at Indiana University, was a visiting lecturer in the department of political science at the University of Mississippi from April 20-24.

Quincy Wright, professor of foreign affairs at the University of Virginia, will lecture at the Hague Academy of International Law, August 3-21, 1959. This is the thirtieth year of the program's inception.

Ronald J. Yalem was appointed visiting assistant professor of political science at the University of Missouri for the second semester, 1958-1959.

APPOINTMENTS AND STAFF CHANGES

Emile B. Ader has been promoted from associate professor to professor of political science at the University of Tulsa. He will be on leave of absence from July 1 to January 1 to serve as consultant in International Relations at the Naval War College.

Fred T. Bent has accepted a position as associate professor of public administration in the graduate school of business and public administration, Cornell University.

Eugene L. Burdick has been promoted to the rank of associate professor at the University of California.

Fred G. Burke has been promoted to the rank of associate professor of political science at Ohio Wesleyan University. Professor Burke will serve, also, as director of the Ben A. Arneson Institute of Practical Politics.

David Calleo of Yale University has accepted an appointment as instructor in the department of political science at Brown University beginning next September.

H. Dicken Cherry, director for foreign service studies, Baylor University, has been named to the post of editor of Background on World Politics. He succeeds Henry C. Bush, the founder of the journal.

Lynn W. Eley has been appointed associate director of the university extension service and associate professor of political science at the University of Michigan. He formerly was supervisor of the Lansing office of the University's institute of public administration.

John H. Ferguson, having resigned as Secretary of Administration and Budget of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, has returned to the Pennsylvania State University.

C. Dale Fuller has resigned as director of the Social Science Foundation and chairman of the department of international relations at the University of Denver to become vice president of the Foreign Policy Association. He took up his new duties in New York City on May 1, 1959.

Ernst B. Haas has been promoted to the rank of associate professor at the University of California.

Ken Hechler, formerly a member of the department of political science at Marshall College was formally sworn in as a Democratic member of the House of Representatives representing the 4th District in West Virginia. This seat has been held for three terms by a former member of the department, M. G. Burnside.

C. J. Hein, visiting professor at West Virginia University during the 1958-59 academic year, has accepted a research appointment in Washington, D. C., from the United States Department of Agriculture. He will work in the Taxation and Local Government section of the Farm Economics Research Division.

Gilbert O. Hourtoule, assistant professor of government and law and a member of the faculty of Lafayette College since 1958, was appointed assistant dean of the college effective August 1958.

J. Woodford Howard, Jr., of Princeton University, has been appointed instructor in government and law at Lafayette College.

Samuel P. Huntington has been added to the staff of Columbia University as an associate professor of government. For the next two years, he will devote two-thirds of his time to research under the Institute of War and Peace Studies, and one-third to teaching.

Carl Leiden has resigned his position as associate professor at Marshall College to accept a position at American University in Cairo, Egypt. During the summer he will do research in London.

Milton R. Merrill, head of the department of political science at Utah State University, Logan, Utah, has been named vice-president of the institution.

Glenn G. Morgan has been appointed assistant professor of political science at San Jose State College beginning in the fall of 1959.

Donald C. Mundinger, has been appointed assistant professor of government in the department of government at Valparaiso University.

Robert G. Neumann, currently acting director of the Institute for International and Foreign studies at the University of California (Los Angeles), has accepted an appointment as director of the Institute.

Robert North and Nobutaka Ike have been appointed associate professors in the department of political science at Stanford University. Dr. North will continue to serve as research associate in the Hoover Institution, and as staff officer to the University's Committee on International Studies. Dr. Ike, who is on research leave with a grant from the University's Committee on East-Asian Research, will continue to serve as curator to the Japanese collection of the Hoover Institution in addition to his duties in the department of political science.

Edward Padgett who was appointed last fall as acting assistant professor of political science to take the place of George Willis, who was given leave of absence for the year, has accepted a permanent appointment to the University of Cincinnati as associate professor of political science. Professor Willis is resigning from the staff of the political science department to continue his work as a member of the Board of Elections of Hamilton County and as executive director of the Hamilton County Democratic party organization.

Richard L. Park of the University of California (Berkeley) has accepted a position as associate professor of political science at the University of Michigan.

Julius Paul, associate professor in the government department at Southern Illinois University, will join the department of political science at Wayne State University as associate professor in September.

Melvin Richter was promoted to the rank of assistant professor of political science at Hunter College as of January 1, 1959.

James A. Riedel, has been appointed chairman of the government department at Union College to replace Douglas Campbell in that post. Campbell's illness will not prevent his continued teaching with a reduced load.

John P. Roche, professor of politics and dean of the faculty at Brandeis University, has been named the first incumbent of the Morris Hillquit Chair in American Legal and Social Thought, established in memory of the great American socialist and civil libertarian.

Paul Seabury has been promoted to the rank of associate professor of political science at the University of California.

Kurt Steiner of Stanford University has been promoted to associate professor of political science.

Roger Swearingen of the University of Southern California will be at Columbia University during the fall term, as visiting professor of government, taking James William Morley's place while the latter is on leave.

Helen Shirley Thomas has been appointed an instructor in political science at Goucher College beginning September 1959.

Norman Thomas of Princeton University has been appointed instructor of political science at the University of Michigan.

Cecil Van Crabb, Jr., has been promoted to associate professor at Vassar College.

Sheldon S. Wolin has been promoted to the rank of associate professor at the University of California.

IN MEMORIAM

Cecil H. Driver, professor of political science at Yale University, died in his sleep on October 19, 1958, in his apartment in New Haven. He was 58. Except for his father and a brother in England, he left no survivors, his wife having died two years earlier; they had no children. For the last several years of his life he had been ill as a result of two heart attacks in as many years. He had, however, resumed some teaching in the Fall; and while he was very far from the old robust figure whose wit, pungency, and humor made him one of Yale's most popular and respected teachers for over two decades, his sudden death came as a surprise and shock to his colleagues and students.

A native of England, Professor Driver was born in Bedfordshire, grew up in Norfolk, won a grammar school scholarship, served as a physical training instructor in the British Army, and then, after the First World War, entered King's College of the University of London, from which he received first class honors upon his graduation in 1922. He was a lecturer in constitutional history at his alma mater, and in 1932, he accepted a Rockefeller Traveling Fellowship that brought him to the United States. Here among other universities he visited Yale. This was the initiation of the long and devoted service at Yale that marked the remainder of his life. He came to Yale as an associate professor of government in 1935, was promoted to the rank of professor in 1947, became director of graduate studies in 1953, and chairman of the department in 1955. A year later he had the first of the heart attacks that ultimately carried him off.

Although he was wont to say that he rarely read any work, no matter how poor, from which he did not learn something, he was severe in the standards he set for himself and his students. Doubtless he was too severe; for though brilliant and erudite, with a superb style in written as well as in oral prose, he wrote little. Discerning readers of his essays on