The Fate of the Atlantic Community

Elliot R. Goodman

Never before have the competing visions of the future of the Atlantic Community and the problems that stand in the way of their achievement been set forth with such force and clarity. Attacks on past and present efforts to transcend the nation-state system are given particular attention. The possible evolution of the political, military, economic and monetary policies of the North Atlantic area are surveyed and both the potential benefits and dangers of different policy choices are identified and evaluated. Professor Goodman displays a striking talent for relating problems of Western organization to the substantive issues of our time. One consequence of this is the realization that some of the problems thrust upon the West are inherently insoluble in the present matrix of Atlantic methods and structure. This leads to the conclusion that improved methods of dealing with those basic problems are urgently required.

From The

ON THE CREATION OF A JUST WORLD ORDER

Preferred Worlds for the 1990's

Edited by Saul H. Mendlovitz, Rutgers University

"Thoughtful individuals throughout the world recognize that the contemporary world system will not be able to survive the crises of our times. These essays are an important and unique collection for anyone who wishes to participate and contribute to positive solutions...."

— Robert S. McNamara, President, International Bank for Reconstruction and Development

"... essential reading for anyone concerned with the prospects of world peace and the evolution of a socially just and ecologically sane human community during the next twenty years."— Richard J. Barnet, Director, Institute for Policy Studies

A STUDY OF FUTURE WORLDS

Richard A. Falk, Princeton University

Arguing that the critical problems we face are global in nature, the author proposes a practical system of global institutions capable of mounting effective solutions to them. He details the kinds of world-wide organizations that are desperately needed, and offers a precise and inventive plan for achieving them. A challenge to narrow, national approaches to world problems, Future Worlds both insists on the necessity of global thinking, and offers its own provocative design for cosmopolitan reform.

FOOTSTEPS INTO THE FUTURE

Diagnosis of the Present World and a Design for an Alternative

Rajni Kothari, Centre for the Study of Developing Societies, Delhi

A prominent Indian political scientist offers a step-by-step plan for ending the uneven development among rich and poor nations and overcoming the current structure of dominance in international life. Kothari's proposals affirm the autonomy of all peoples and states and the equality between them as the key to the future progress of a humane global community. The important role of the Third World in this design for the future is given special consideration.

SALT: THE MOSCOW AGREEMENTS AND BEYOND

Edited by Mason Willrich, University of Virginia School of Law, and John B. Rhinelander

Published under the auspices of the American Society of International Law, this book examines the background of the SALT I agreements and analyzes them in light of the weapons systems with which they deal. Complete texts of the agreements are included in the ten-part appendix. "The best available book on the SALT I accords, in which ten recognized experts explore all facets of SALT. . . . An excellent glossary, bibliography and appendix combined with felicitous prose make this jargon-free work comprehensible to a wide audience." —Foreign Affairs

ON WAR

Political Violence in the International System

Manus I. Midlarsky, University of Colorado at Boulder

What causes war, and under what conditions is it protracted? This work is an investigation of the circumstances under which the onset of political violence—internationally, regionally, and domestically—is most likely; and those circumstances which most affect the intensity and duration of the conflict.

The author's conclusions are based on statistical analyses of the war experience of over 100 countries in the modern period of 1815-1945. Sheds new light on the features of the international system that make war so prevalent.

THE FOREIGN POLICIES OF THE POWERS

Edited by F. S. Northedge

What makes the major powers act as they do? That is the question addressed by ten leading authorities in these original and up-to-date studies of the great states. The authors are concerned with the factors which produce habitual, not particular, responses to international issues. They examine the forces determining the foreign policy behavior of France, Britain, West Germany, the Soviet Union, Canada, the United States, the People's Republic of China, Japan, India, and Indonesia.
