Excavating Asian History

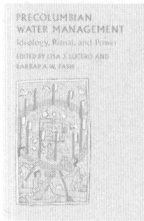

Interdisciplinary Studies in Archaeology and History

Edited by Norman Yoffee and Bradley L. Crowell

This book is the first to show how history and archaeology must be integrated in order to understand the past, drawing on contemporary archaeological techniques and interpretations to illustrate the strengths of the material culture record. Ranging widely across Asia from the Levant to Ji'nan and from the third millennium BC to the second millennium AD, the contributors illustrate the benefits of interdisciplinary investigations to show how archaeology is changing our understanding of history, with archaeological findings often contradicting information gleaned from historical sources. It marks a major step toward releasing archaeologists from the "tyranny of the text" and asserts the archaeological record as a reliable source for reconstructing the human past.

Precolumbian Water Management

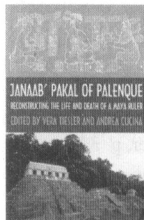

Ideology, Ritual, and Power

Edited by Lisa J. Lucero and Barbara Fash

Ranging from the irrigation networks of Teotihuacan to the use of ritual water technology at Casas Grandes, this collection explores how control of water shaped the political, economic, and religious landscape of the ancient Americas. Through analysis of water management facilities, settlement patterns, shrines, and water-related architectural imagery, the contributors present a unified perspective of how water was conceived, used, and represented in ancient greater Mesoamerica.

Janaab' Pakal of Palenque

Reconstructing the Life and Death of a Maya Ruler

Edited by Vera Tiesler and Andrea Cucina

A reanalysis of the remains of the ruler Janaab' Pakal provides answers to old disputes over the accuracy of both skeletal and epigraphic studies, and poses new questions in the field of Maya dynastic research. Scholars in epigraphy, anthropology, and bioarchaeology bring to light new evidence regarding the ruler's age, clarify his medical history and the identification of the remains found with him, reevaluate his role in life, and offer modern insights into ritual and sacrificial practices associated with Pakal.

Mimbres Society

Edited by Valli Powell-Martí and Patricia Gilman

The enchanting pottery created by the Mimbres people is considered by many scholars to be the most unique and extraordinary of all the ancient art traditions of North America. This collection of essays argues that this collection of essays argues that this fame—however well-merited—has obscured other equally remarkable achievements of this sophisticated society, including the formation of early egalitarian communities.

NOTICE TO AUTHORS

American Antiquity publishes original papers on the archaeology of the New World and on archaeological method, theory, and practice worldwide. Authors of papers on Latin American topics are encouraged to submit their work to Latin American Antiquity. Papers on Latin American archaeology addressing broad methodological, theoretical, or comparative issues may be accepted by either journal after consultation with the editors. Authors submit manuscripts to the editor for consideration as ARTICLES, REPORTS, COMMENTS, or FORUM essays. REVIEWS and BOOK NOTES are solicited by the respective associate editor. OBITUARIES should be submitted to the editor, The SAA Archaeological Record, for publication (see SAA Bulletin March/April 1996, p. 7, for further details).

Authors should submit an original and four copies of their manuscripts, including all figures, tables, references, and notes. Detailed information on policy, style, and technical matters of manuscript preparation is given in the "Editorial Policy, Information for Authors, and Style Guide for American Antiquity and Latin American Antiquity," which appeared in the October 1992 issue (57:749–770) and can be read on the World Wide Web at <http://www.saa.org/Publications/StyleGuide/styframe.html>.

The editor reserves the right to evaluate manuscripts (with or without peer review) for appropriate subject matter, quality, length, and compliance with the style guide. Manuscripts may be returned to authors if they fail to meet expectations or conform to these guidelines. Manuscripts are evaluated by the editor in consultation with peer referees, as appropriate. The editor has the final responsibility for all decisions regarding manuscripts. The review process generally takes a minimum of two to four months. Authors will be notified as soon as a decision is reached to accept (outright or with revisions) or reject a manuscript.

To ensure the prompt receipt and handling of manuscripts, please send them to the editor: Michael Jochim, 57 Mesa Rd., Department of Anthropology, University of California-Santa Barbara, Santa Barbara, CA 93106-3210.
