Jonathan D. Spence draws
“a gripping and wide-ranging portrait of late
16th-century cultural history in both the West and the East”***

In 1577, Matteo Ricci set out from Italy to bring Christian faith and Western thought to Ming Dynasty China. In this dazzling work of history and biography, Jonathan Spence recounts Ricci's life, and in so doing illuminates a whole era of world history. For just as Ricci sought in his work to understand the connections between Christian symbolism and belief and the ancient philosophies of the Orient, his life came to represent a fascinating juxtaposition of these two cultures. Relating intellectual, social, and political history, THE MEMORY PALACE OF MATTEO RICCI reveals the sixteenth century as it has never been seen before.

“Ricci's Memory Palace takes on new meaning as interpreted by one of our finest historians of Chinese history and civilization”
—Natalie Zemon Davis.*

“A fascinating story... authoritative and learned... written with grace”

Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files

CHINA: Internal Affairs, 1930-1949

Covering the internal affairs of China from 1930 through 1949, the State Department's Central Files are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on the political, military, social, and economic developments in China. Although scholars have used these files at the National Archives for several years, the files have never been published in any format until now. By making available over 200,000 pages of special reports, confidential correspondence, interviews, minutes of meetings, and translated documents, this new collection opens broad avenues of research.

The period covered by these files was marked, in the 1930s, by bitter civil war between Kuomintang and Communist forces, by military intervention by Japan, and by the temporary consolidation of rival Chinese forces against Japan. In the 1940s, the hard-fought victory against Japanese occupation was followed by resumption of the civil war, failed mediation attempts by the U.S., and seizure of power by the Communists. These political and military developments, as well as social and economic ones, were observed and reported by American diplomatic personnel throughout China, both at the U.S. embassy and at consulates (Amoy, Canton, Chefoo, Foochow, Hankow, Harbin, Mukden, Nanking, Shanghai, Swatow, Tientsin, Tsinan, Tsingtao, and Yunnanfu). These reports are the largest component of the Central Files. Additionally, there are reports from the State Department's Division of Far Eastern Affairs, as well as reports on China from such other U.S. diplomatic posts as Tokyo, Saigon, Hanoi, Calcutta, London, Paris, Berlin, and Moscow.

Now available in a convenient microfilm edition, the State Department's Central Files on Chinese internal affairs will be counted among the most useful research collections in any library. Filmed from the original documents in the National Archives, our edition contains all of the important files; only files of little or no historical value (such as those dealing with claims of U.S. citizens) have been omitted. Of the thousands of documents now being published for the first time, the following list contains just a small fraction.

- The Chinese Civil War: The Honan Front. (1930)
- Chiang Kai-shek and the Prospects of Unification. (1930)
- The Anti-Communist Campaign. (1931)
- Mukden and the Northern War Lords. (1931)
- Reaction to the Japanese Invasion of Manchuria. (1932)
- Establishment of Manchukuo. (1932)
- Soong and Chiang in Open Conflict on Question of Resistance to Japanese Actions. (1933)

- Reported Aspirations of General Chiang Kai-shek. (1934)
- Evacuation of Yunnan by Communists. (1935)
- Chniag Kai-shek Detained by Chang Hsueh-liang. (1936)
- Absence of Chinese Leadership in the Occupied Areas. (1938)
- Wartime Organization of the Chinese Government. (1938)
- Chinese Communist Party's Recommendations on Foreign Policy. (1938)
- Political Effect of the Loss of Canton and Hankow. (1938)
- Continuing Chinese Determination to Resist. (1939)
- U.S. Attitude toward the Impending Establishment under Japanese Auspices of a "Central Government" for China. (1939)
- Kuomintang Concessions to the Chinese Communists. (1940)
- Chou En-lai on International Affairs and Chinese International Problems. (1941)
- Japanese Program for Development of North China. (1941)
- Chinese Reaction to Defeat in Burma. (1942)

- Conversations with Top Communist Leaders. (1949)

The "publication" of the State Department's Confidential Central Files on China's internal affairs is a monumental event which adds new dimensions to the study of China in the 1930s and 1940s. Used together with Chinese Nationalist and Communist materials, as well as Japanese, Russian, British, German, and French sources (when available), the availability of these Central Files could open a new era of intensive multi-archival research on China. A thorough re-examination of Chinese history in the 1930s and 1940s is in order.

—Dr. Immanuel C.Y. Hsu
Professor of History
University of California, Santa Barbara

Now available outside the National Archives for the first time, these records are indispensable for professors and students who are interested in China during the pivotal decades of the 1930s and 1940s. It will be a boon to researchers to have access to the State Department's voluminous files in one convenient microfilm collection.

—Dr. Kenneth E. Folsom
Associate Professor of History
University of Maryland

While doing research on domestic Chinese politics of the 1920s, I found the State Department Central Files, located in the National Archives, to be a rich and illuminating source of data and analyses. Now it is good news that the files for the 1930s and 1940s are available on microfilm. The quality of the reporting by the "China hands" of the Foreign Service was first-rate, and scholars should take advantage of these files through their libraries.

—Dr. Lucian W. Pye
Ford Professor of Political Science
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

The Nationalist Revolution in China

1923–1928

C. MARTIN WILBUR

This lively history of China's Nationalist revolution, based on Chinese, Russian and Western language sources, tells the story of a small group of Chinese patriots headed by Sun Yat-sen until his death in 1925.

Both Soviet Russia and the fledgling Chinese Communist party joined the patriots' efforts to unify the country, end imperialist privilege and bring the Kuomintang to power. But when the fighting was over, the Communists were driven underground, the Russian experts were expelled and a faction-driven Nationalist Party led by Chiang Kai-shek could claim to China's new government.

Understanding Green Revolutions

Agrarian Change and Development Planning in South Asia

TIM BAYLISS-SMITH and SUDHIR WANMALI, Editors

Twenty-one development studies specialists examine theoretical and practical aspects of agrarian change in Third World countries. This process of change, mainly the result of dramatic improvements in agricultural techniques, is often termed "The Green Revolution." Although the book's emphasis is on South Asia, case studies from East Africa, Latin America, and preindustrial Europe are included.

The Three Worlds
Culture and World Development
Peter Worsley

"Underdevelopment today is not a natural condition, but an unnatural one, a social state which is the product of history; . . . not something that just happened, governed by the logic of an impersonal system, but something that was done to people by other people."

In this work of extraordinary scope and vision, Worsley considers the historical events, the actions, the systems that have served to confine the majority of humankind to what we know as the Third World. He surveys the whole range of theories of development, from the Marxist approach to that of the social anthropologists.

Revolution Postponed

Women in Contemporary China

Margery Wolf. The Communist revolution promised Chinese women an end to thousands of years of subjugation, an equality with men in all matters legal, political, social, and economic. This book examines the extent to which this promise has been kept. Based on nearly a year of field research and interviews with over 300 women in six widely separated rural and urban areas, it gives us a vivid picture of Chinese women today—their daily lives, their views of the present, their hopes for the future. The women interviewed are allowed to speak for themselves, and though some take refuge behind government slogans and others are shy or wary, a surprising number are quick to give their own opinions despite an ever-present government cadre. These opinions, combined with the author's astute observations on their local and national context, add up to a wholly new perspective on an all too familiar problem. $21.95

Charles O. Hucker. Premodern Chinese documents contain a great number and variety of official titles important to an understanding of traditional Chinese government but often elusive in meaning and significance. Marking a milestone in Chinese studies, this encyclopedic work translates and defines more than 8,000 personal titles and institutional names spanning the period from antiquity to the mid-19th century. Arranged alphabetically by Wade-Giles romanizations, basic entries include Chinese characters and a suggested English translation; most go on to supply historical and comparative information. The Introduction presents a dynasty-by-dynasty account of China's governmental structure, and the work concludes with indexes to both English renderings and Chinese characters and a conversion table from Pinyin to Wade-Giles. $49.50

The Saga of Dazai Osamu

A Critical Study with Translations

---

Phyllis I. Lyons. In Japan, Dazai Osamu (1909–1948) is one of the most famous of all modern writers, known both for his literature and his tumultuous life, which included expulsion from a wealthy family, complicated involvements with women, and several suicide attempts. Able to transform the events of his catastrophic life into deceptively simple and emotionally intense stories, Dazai made his own pain and confusion intimate to the experience of his readers. This book not only examines Dazai's life and some of the psychological problems that haunted him, but studies his many autobiographical stories and novels, which are seen as one long, continuing narrative. Included are award-winning translations of five of Dazai's most moving short stories and the celebrated nonfiction novel, Tsugaru, about Dazai's return to his childhood home. $38.50

The Peasant Economy and Social Change in North China

Philip C. C. Huang. The author presents a new interpretation of the origins and nature of the agrarian crisis that gripped the North China Plain in the two centuries before the Revolution. Through a comparison of the histories of small family farms and larger scale managerial farms, the author documents and illustrates the long-term trends of agricultural commercialization, social stratification, and mounting population pressure in the peasant economy. He shows how those changes, in the absence of dynamic economic growth, combined over several centuries to produce a majority of poor peasants who required both family farming and agricultural wage income to survive. The formation of such a poor peasantry ultimately altered both the nature of village communities and their relations with the elites and the state, creating tensions that led in the end to revolution. $35.00

ECONOMIC SURVEY OF EUROPE

Issued annually since 1948

The Survey is an internationally recognised economic report. It ranks among the most highly regarded analyses of economic trends and provides an outlook for the future. Covering a wide range of research, it records the changing patterns of trade and output in Europe and North America.

An important part of the annual Survey is dedicated to a review of recent economic developments in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. In this field it is the most authoritative source of internationally comparable information. The Survey is also one of the principal sources on East-West trade developments.

Extensive cross-referencing is provided throughout. About 360 pp. $19.95 cloth. March.

Approaches to Islam in Religious Studies

RICHARD C. MARTIN, ed.

Foreword by Charles J. Adams

This new collection of essays argues for an increase in the attention given to Islam as part of religious studies and calls for greater clarity in our understanding both of Islam as religion and of religion in terms of Islam. In contrast to the strong textual and philological orientation of traditional Islamic studies, this volume offers an exposition of Islam as it is experienced and lived by members of the community. About 250 pp. $18.95 cloth. May.

Where Kings and Gods Meet

The Royal Centre at Vijayanagara

JOHN M. FRITZ, GEORGE MITCHELL,
& M.S. NAGARAJA RAO

Vijayanagara—the "City of Victory"—was the capital of the last great Hindu empire of south India, destroyed by Muslim armies in 1565. This new archaeological report not only delineates both sacred and secular ruins, but also interprets architectural elements as critical components in a system that established the authority of imperial rulers. *About 160 pp., 114 illus. $28.95 cloth.
