A History of Chinese Civilisation

JACQUES GERNET

This masterly survey of the history and culture of China is now more widely available for students and for the general reader concerned with the broad sweep of China's past.

'Gernet has accomplished with skill and vision one of scholarship's most daunting tasks, the writing of a one-volume history of China.'

Coal Mining in China's Economy and Society, 1895–1937

TIM WRIGHT

This book provides an important contribution to the economic history of modern China. It examines the history of the coal-mining industry – one of China's largest and most important – from the beginnings of modernisation around 1895 to the start of the Sino-Japanese War in 1937. It addresses questions of both economic and socio-political history and contributes to our knowledge of many aspects of early twentieth-century Chinese history.

The Nationalist Revolution in China 1923–1928

C. MARTIN WILBUR

This lively history of China's Nationalist revolution (reprinted from Volume 12 of The Cambridge History of China) tells the story of a small group of Chinese patriots headed by Sun Yat-sen until his death in 1925. They mobilised men, money, and propaganda to create a provincial base from which to launch a campaign to unify the country, end imperialist privilege, and bring the Kuomintang to power.

Class and Social Stratification in Post-Revolution China

Edited by J. L. WATSON

This book deals with the social transformations that have occurred in Chinese society since 1949. The contributors examine the rigid system of class labels introduced by the Chinese Communist Party during the 1950s together with many other aspects of China's new class structure.

'... a useful addition to the library of any institution specialising in the study of Chinese developments.'

Family and Population in East Asian History

Edited by Susan B. Hanley and Arthur P. Wolf. The 13 papers in this volume represent a concerted effort to place the historical demography of East Asia on a firm quantitative basis. They explore a wide range of Chinese and Japanese documentary sources and raise new and substantial questions about both family history and population change. The most important finding is that when viewed from a demographic perspective, China and Japan are seen to be fundamentally different societies, refuting Malthus's argument that "the state of Japan resembles in so many respects that of China, that a particular consideration of it would lead into many repetitions." What makes this particularly intriguing is that the difference between these two Asian civilizations is shown to be similar to the difference between Western Europe and Eastern Europe. Contributors: Ansley J. Coale, Susan B. Hanley, Stevan Harrell, Akira Hayami, Ts'ui-jung Liu, Dana Morris, Burton Pasternak, Sophie Sa, Yōichiro Sasaki, Robert J. Smith, Thomas C. Smith, Arthur P. Wolf, and Kozo Yamamura. $32.50

P'eng P'ai and the Hai-Lu-feng Soviet

Fernando Galbiati. The story of P'eng P'ai (1896–1929), founder and guiding spirit of China's first Communist enclave, shows that an organized peasantry and the Chinese Communist Party were linked as early as the 1920's. Indeed, P'eng P'ai's experience in Hai-Lu-feng epitomizes almost every ingredient of the later Maoist formula for victory in the countryside, as well as many of the difficulties Communist leaders would face in the 1930's and 1940's. The author emphasizes events in Hai-Lu-feng, but he also traces developments at higher levels of the CCP and the Kuomintang, events that would lead to P'eng P'ai's execution at the personal command of Chiang Kai-shek.

"Galbiati's impressive work is not only the definitive, in-depth study of P'eng P'ai's revolutionary career, it is also a classic analysis of Chinese peasant mobilization."—Lucien Bianco. $42.50

Manuscripts

The China Quarterly welcomes the submission of manuscripts from scholars, including research students, on all aspects of contemporary China and from all points of view, including those which deal with Taiwan and the Overseas Chinese. Articles on China prior to 1949 are also welcome, particularly, but not exclusively, when these relate directly to contemporary China or to the history of the Chinese Communist Party. Articles should be submitted, in triplicate, to the editorial office. They should be typed in double spacing, footnotes being placed at the end of the article; preferably conform to the styling of The China Quarterly; and normally not exceed 8–10,000 words in length. A style sheet is available upon request. Submission of a manuscript is taken to imply that it has not previously been published and that it is not currently being considered elsewhere.

The China Quarterly is published by the Contemporary China Institute of the School of Oriental and African Studies, London University. The views expressed in articles are those of individual authors and do not necessarily represent the views of the Contemporary China Institute.

A MIRROR FOR SOCIALISM

Soviet Criticisms of China

by GILBERT ROZMAN

This book analyses the Soviet debate on "What went wrong in China" and is the first extensive examination of Soviet writings on the subject. In the course of his exhaustive research the author has discovered how the issue of "China" is being used by Soviet officials and intellectuals as a vehicle for traditionalists and reformists to debate the future directions of Soviet socialism. An original and highly significant contribution to understanding the political trends within the Soviet Union and the Communist world.

"There is no doubt about the validity of the author's thesis ... he has gone back to the roots of this division and divergence of view between Soviet traditionalists and reformists ... Certainly an original work which conveys [Soviet specialists'] views in a very responsible fashion."

Professor J. Erickson, FRSE, University of Edinburgh.

Gilbert Rozman is Professor of Sociology at Princeton University and his research work on the Soviet Union and China is highly respected.
