

objectively the results achieved through action undertaken in cooperation with international organizations and to report on the experiences gained (Resolution number 3.271).

- (6) To collect, in a regular and systematic manner, statistical information on their educational, scientific and cultural life and institutions and to forward such statistics periodically to the Director General (Resolution number 3.31).

Obviously, American social scientists are already contributing much to the understanding of these important problems, in both their domestic and foreign aspects, by research and discussion. We will benefit, along with Unesco, if these resolutions stimulate further expert analysis and action at home and abroad. In some areas of the world, where the social sciences as we know them have lagged, these resolutions may help to encourage local work which will enrich knowledge and inform policies.

If item (6), concerning the collection of statistics, is set aside for the present purposes as largely an ongoing governmental responsibility, each of the problems is receiving considerable attention by various individuals and institutions. If there is any lag it is possibly in item (5), evaluation of international cooperation programs, where, however, research programs have got under way in the past two years.

The question thus arises—What, if anything, can these resolutions mean to the United States? What do we do about them that we are not already doing? Since neither Unesco nor the staff of the U. S. National Commission for Unesco has funds to invest in vitalizing these resolutions, what additional voluntary action might be possible and worthwhile?

Correspondence on these questions would be welcomed by Professor Peter Odegard, Department of Political Science, University of California, Berkeley, California.

Several suggestions have been made which seem feasible and likely to be helpful. (1) It would be useful if individuals and institutions made certain that their research on these problems reached the Department of Social Sciences, Unesco House, 19 Avenue Kleber, Paris, so that the reporting on relevant American research would be timely. (2) Professional correspondence can be a highly useful form of international cooperation. Already, no doubt, American scholars interested in these problems are in touch with at least some of their interested counterparts in foreign countries. The clearing-house in Unesco, which can also tap some of the data being collected by the field social sciences officers in New Delhi and Cairo, may upon inquiry be able to suggest additional key correspondents. (3) The pertinent associations in their annual meetings might take cognizance of these topics and plan for their discussion so that, ultimately, the results are brought to the attention of Unesco and other agencies.

The following social scientists are presently on the U. S. National Commission: Robert C. Angell (State and Local Government), Gordon Clapp (Federal Government), Frederick S. Dunn (Social Science Research Council), John Hope Franklin (Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools for Negroes), Lewis U. Hanke (State and Local Government), Grayson L. Kirk (Member at Large), Otto Klineberg (Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues), Walter H. C. Laves (Member at Large), Rensis Likert (State and Local Government), C. Joseph Nuesse (National Catholic Welfare Conference), Peter H. Odegard (American Political Science Association), Ordway Tead (State and Local Government), and M. L. Wilson (Federal Government).—
RICHARD H. HEINDEL.

APPOINTMENTS AND STAFF CHANGES

Elton Atwater, associate professor of political science at the Pennsylvania State College, has been named director of the Foreign Affairs Summer Institute at that institution.

Don L. Bowen, formerly of the University of Oklahoma, has been appointed associate professor of government and politics and director of the Bureau of Governmental Research at the University of Maryland.

Ralph J. D. Braibanti, recently of Kenyon College, has been appointed associate professor of political science at Duke University, effective September, 1953.

A. C. Breckenridge was appointed chairman of the department of political science at the University of Nebraska, effective February 1, 1953.

Edward H. Buehrig, associate professor of political science at Indiana University, resumed his work in the department on February 1, after a leave of absence of one and one-half years to lecture at the National War College and to serve on the staff of the Brookings Institution in Washington, D. C.

Carl H. Chatters, executive director of the American Municipal Association, has been appointed faculty lecturer in the Cornell School of Business and Public Administration.

Kenneth Colegrove, professor of political science, emeritus, Northwestern University, has accepted a position at Queens College.

John C. Corson, formerly an executive on the Washington Post, Director of the U. S. Employment Service, and Director of the Bureau of Old Age and Survivors' Insurance, Federal Social Security Administration, will serve as Director of the Executive Development Programs in the Cornell School of Business and Public Administration during the summer of 1953.

Marshall Dimock was a visiting professor in the School of Public Administration, University of Puerto Rico, during the spring semester. He will spend three months in England during the fall at the Administrative Staff College, Henley-on-Thames.

Joseph Dunner has resumed his duties as chairman of the political science department at Grinnell College after a year's leave of absence.

G. Homer Durham, director of the Institute of Government at the University of Utah, was elected Academic Vice President of the University by the Board of Regents on February 9, 1953.

Charles Fairman has resigned his position as professor of law and political science at Stanford University to accept the recently endowed Nagel Professorship in the School of Law, Washington University, St. Louis.

W. O. Farber, head of the department of government at the University of South Dakota, has been reappointed director of legislative research for the South Dakota Legislative Research Council.

Robert Y. Fluno, formerly of Mount Union

College, has been appointed associate professor of political science at Whitman College and will teach courses in American government and administration.

Andrew Gyorgy has been appointed associate professor of government at Boston University and will assume his duties in September.

Philip S. Haring was a lecturer in political science at Northwestern University during the spring quarter.

John S. Harris has joined the department of government at Wayne University as an assistant professor.

Amos H. Hawley, of the University of Michigan, has been assigned for one year, beginning in June, 1953, to the staff of the Institute of Public Administration, University of the Philippines.

Ferrel Heady, associate professor of political science and assistant director of the Institute of Public Administration at the University of Michigan, has been assigned for approximately one year, beginning June, 1953, to the Institute of Public Administration, University of the Philippines, where he will serve as director and chief adviser.

Richard H. Heindel, deputy director, UNESCO Relations Staff, Department of State, will return this summer to be consultant-lecturer for the second Institute of World Affairs at the Pennsylvania State College.

Francis Heller, on leave since May, 1951, from the University of Kansas, resumed his position as associate professor of political science in February.

Samuel Hendel has been promoted to the rank of associate professor in the department of government at the City College of New York.

John Herz, of the City College of New York, was a visiting professor on the graduate faculty of the New School for Social Research during the spring semester.

George A. Higgins, S.J., has been appointed chairman of the department of history and political science at the College of the Holy Cross.

Edward H. Hobbs was recently advanced to an associate professorship of political science at the University of Mississippi.

Louise W. Holborn, associate professor of government at Connecticut College, has been granted a leave of absence, effective April 1, 1953, to spend six months in Germany as a participant in the Educational Exchange Program.

Barna Horvath has been reappointed visiting professor of political science on the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science, New School for Social Research, for 1953-1954.

John A. Houston was recently promoted to the rank of associate professor of political science at the University of Mississippi.

Erich Hula, of the New School for Social Research, was a visiting professor of international law in the department of government at Cornell University during the spring term of 1953.

Philip C. Jessup, former ambassador-at-large, has returned to the department of public law and government at Columbia University.

Hattie M. Kawahara, assistant professor of government at Wayne University, spent the past academic year studying in Japan under a Ford Foundation grant.

Lane W. Lancaster resigned the chairmanship of the department of political science at the University of Nebraska, effective February 1, 1953, but will continue his duties as a professor.

L. Larry Leonard has been appointed visiting professor on the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science, New School for Social Research, for the summer term, 1953.

James C. Lien, assistant professor of political science at the University of California (Los Angeles), was on sabbatical leave during the spring semester.

Alfred D. Low, associate professor of history and political science at Marietta College, served as visiting lecturer in political science at New York State Teachers College, Albany, during the second semester of the past academic year.

William L. Lucey, S.J., former chairman of the department of history and political science at the College of the Holy Cross, has been appointed Librarian of the College.

Hugo V. Mailey has been advanced to a full professorship in the political science department at Wilkes College, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania.

Robert Matteson, of the University of Pennsylvania, is serving as Assistant to the Federal Security Administrator, Harold Stassen.

Elwyn A. Mauck, formerly director of the State Fiscal Research Bureau of Maryland, has been appointed public administration consultant in the Institute of Inter-American Affairs. His first assignment is to serve as acting head of a newly created department of public administration at the University of Minas Gerais. Dr. Mauck will also serve as special adviser to the City of Belo Horizonte, Brazil, in which the University is located, and to the State of Minas Gerais.

Joseph E. McLean, associate professor of politics at Princeton University, is serving as a member of the New Jersey Law Enforcement Council, and is a consultant to the Public Administration Service in connection with a study of municipalities in Puerto Rico. He is also doing staff work for the Rockefeller Public Service Awards Program.

Boris Mirkin-Guetzévitch has been reappointed visiting professor on the Graduate Faculty of Political and Social Science, New School for Social Research, for the academic year 1953-1954.

Frank Neuber, formerly of the University of Oregon, has been appointed instructor in political science at Whitman College, where he will teach courses in international relations and comparative government.

Sigmund L. Neumann, of Wesleyan University, lectured one day a week at Columbia University during 1952-1953, as he did in the preceding year.

Richard E. Neustadt, formerly special assistant on the White House staff, has been appointed an assistant professor of administration in the Cornell School of Business and Public Administration, effective June 1, 1952. Mr. Neustadt will also assume major responsibilities for the School's Executive Development Programs for both public officials and business administrators.

Richard Park, recently appointed assistant professor of political science at the University of California (Berkeley), has returned from New Delhi, India, to assume his teaching duties.

Rollin B. Posey has resigned as chairman of the department of political science at Northwestern University, effective September, 1953. He will continue as professor of political science.

Luis Racasens-Siches has been reappointed visiting professor in the fields of political science and philosophy at the New School for Social Research for 1953-1954.

Bennett M. Rich, associate professor of political science and director of the Bureau of Government Research at Rutgers University, will be on leave of absence during the academic year 1953-1954 serving as visiting associate professor of political science at the University of Michigan.

Stefan Riesenfeld, professor of law at the University of California (Berkeley), served as lecturer in political science during the spring term to offer graduate work in the international law field, upon the retirement of Professor Hans Kelsen.

Jack D. Rodgers, who formerly taught at Kansas State College, has been appointed instructor of political science at the University of Nebraska.

George F. Rohrlich has been appointed Chief of the Division of Actuarial and Financial Services, Unemployment Insurance Service, Bureau of Employment Security, U. S. Department of Labor.

Allan F. Saunders returned in February from a year's service as Fulbright lecturer in the University of Oslo to resume his duties as professor and chairman of the department of government, University of Hawaii.

Richard M. Scammon, chief of the Division of Research for Western Europe in the U. S. Department of State, has served as professorial lecturer in the department of government of Howard University for the second semester of the current academic year.

Roger V. Shumate, professor of political science at the University of Nebraska, was a Nebraska delegate to the General Assembly of the States, which met in Chicago in December, 1952.

Estal E. Sparlin, formerly assistant director of the St. Louis Governmental Institute, has been appointed director of the Cleveland Citizens League and Bureau of Governmental Research, effective February 15.

George W. Spicer, of the University of Virginia, was a visiting professor of political science at Emory University during the spring quarter of 1953.

David Spitz has been advanced to an associate professorship at the Ohio State University. [Editor's note: In the last issue of the REVIEW, Professor Spitz's promotion was erroneously reported.]

Murray S. Stedman, Jr., associate professor of political science at Swarthmore College, has been granted a leave of absence to serve as political science programme specialist with UNESCO in Paris.

Leo Strauss, of the University of Chicago, spent the winter quarter, 1953, teaching at the University of Judaism in Los Angeles.

Shahid Svhrawardy, Chairman of the Public Service (Civil Service) Commission of Pakistan, was at Columbia University this spring as a visiting professor.

Sterling Tatsuji Takeuchi was a visiting lecturer in the East Asian Institute of Columbia University during 1952-1953.

David Thomson, of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, was a visiting professor of government at Columbia University during the spring session.

Garold W. Thumm has resumed his duties as instructor in political science at the University of Pennsylvania after completing a two-year tour of duty with the Army General Staff in Washington.

Hifsi Timur, of the Faculty of Law at the University of Istanbul, was a visiting professor at Columbia University's Center of Turkish Studies during the spring session.

Daniel W. Tuttle, who has been serving part-time with the Legislative Reference Bureau of the University of Hawaii, will become a full-time assistant professor of government at that institution in September, 1953.