*R*eligion & *L*iterature

R&L is the forum for an on-going discussion of the relations between two crucial human concerns, the religious impulse and the literary forms of any era, place, or language.

We publish three times a year: four scholarly articles in each issue, as well as review essays and book notices. Each year one special issue is devoted to a single theme or area:

1984: An investigation of sacred experience and word in Jewish traditions, edited by Elie Wiesel.

1985: The role of language, literature and the imagination in the life and writings of Simone Weil.

1987: Religion, literature and politics.

1988: The literature of Islam.

1989: Contemporary American Fiction.

R&L has published work by:

M.H. Abrams	Louis Dupré
Thomas J.J. Altizer	Stanley Hauerwas
Felicia Bonaparte	Hugh Kenner
Robert MacAfee Brown	Joseph Mazzeo
Donald Davie	Sallie McFague
Robert Detweiler	Chaim Potok

— and many other thinkers concerned with the intersection between language and the ineffable.

Religion and Literature is a key source for anyone interested in these expressions of the human spirit.

"FAITH, RELIGION AND THEOLOGY is a clear and engaging text for the introductory course in religious studies. It is practical and concrete in its helpful examples and thoughtful in method, analysis, and theological perspective. Both students and teachers will find here an important resource."

– ANNE CARR
University of Chicago

FAITH, RELIGION, AND THEOLOGY

A Contemporary Introduction

Brennan Hill, Paul Knitter, and William Madges

"... I admire how much information and challenges the authors have packed into this volume. If students studied this book diligently, they would come away quite sophisticated about the areas it covers and the challenges that faith, religion and theology present...The book is filled with issues and examples that students should find relevant. It offers some of the terms that students need to negotiate in religion or theology, without being jargon-ridden or overly technical. And it serves up many of the names and notions that one would hope students exposed to religion or theology would take away as part of their adult repertoire..."

– DENISE LARDNER CARMODY
University of Tulsa

"A... text that combines intelligence, deep religious commitment, and a sensitivity to the real-life experiences of young people. The authors have carefully distinguished religious questions from those of faith and, in the process, have managed to produce a book that informs and inspires. Their own long classroom experience as teacher/scholars is apparent on every page of this intelligent and well-written text. Teachers and students should welcome it."

– LAWRENCE S. CUNNINGHAM
University of Notre Dame

"... A major strength of this introductory text is its demonstration that three theologians can incorporate their individual strengths (Hill in religious education, Knitter in interreligious dialogue, and Madges in systematics) into a presentation which flows smoothly, laying a foundation for what is to come and recapitulating ideas which have gone before... The book is very well-written, easily accessible to a non-specialist audience, without over-simplification. The unobtrusive summaries at the end of each chapter will be helpful to both students and instructor. The discussion questions can also be used as tools of classification as well as to stimulate further reflection."
