The Open Studio

Essays on Art and Aesthetics

Susan Stewart

"Susan Stewart's penetrating insight into individual works of art and the compelling narratives she weaves from this into the intention underpinning a particular artist's practice or a thematic topic never fail to engage me. Her writings, limpid and clear, while diverse in tone, structure, and mode, are for me amongst the most compelling and enduring on contemporary art in recent years."

Columbarium

"Throughout this collection, the poet delves into human universals (memory, breath, voice, whisper, loneliness, etc.) while constantly attentive to etymology and word choice. . . . But as in previous works, it is moments of brief and simple aphorism that forcefully summarize the book's project."—Publishers Weekly

State of Exception

Giorgio Agamben

Translated by Kevin Attell

"When a conservative member of the U.S. Congress recently designated the Guantanamo prisoners as 'those who were missed by the bombs' and thus forfeited their right to live, he almost literally evoked Agamben's notion of homo sacer, a man reduced to bare life no longer covered by any legal or civil rights. What you hold in your hands is simply the book for all those who do not see in 9/11 a mere pretext for patriotic mobilization, but an impetus for a deeper reflection on where we stand today with regard to the very fundamentals of our civilization."—Slavoj Zizek

The Dark Gaze

Maurice Blanchot and the Sacred

Kevin Hart

"This book offers the most thorough study to date of the sacred in the writings of Maurice Blanchot. The close and patient readings that Hart advances in this work are the fruit of passionate concern, long reflection, and extraordinary learning. Consistently rigorous and illuminating, The Dark Gaze will be indispensable to scholars of philosophy, religious studies, and literary theory."

Memory, History, Forgetting

Paul Ricoeur

Translated by Kathleen Blamey and David Pellauer

A landmark work in philosophy, Memory, History, Forgetting examines the reciprocal relationship between remembering and forgetting, showing how it affects both the perception of historical experience and the production of historical narrative. A momentous achievement in Ricoeur's career, this book provides the crucial link between his Time and Narrative and Oneself as Another and his recent reflections on ethics and the problems of responsibility and representation.

Cloth $40.00

Confidence Games

Money and Markets in a World without Redemption

Mark C. Taylor

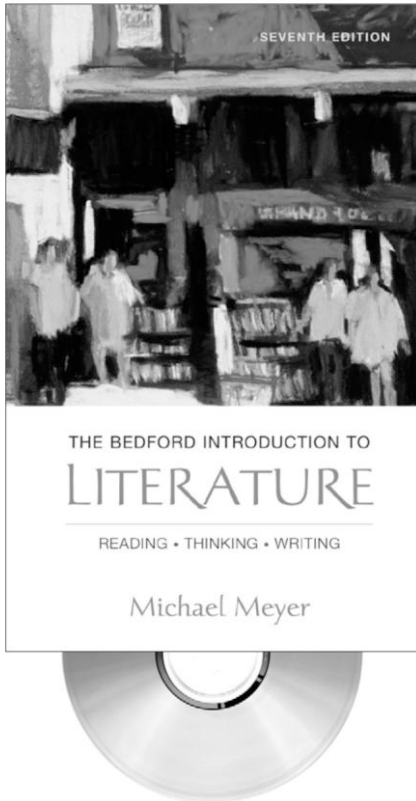

"Mark Taylor has an exceptionally original mind. By producing inter-related critiques of subjects as varied as religion, architecture, science, and the Internet, he has been assembling a kind of geodesic dome of thought over our entire culture. In this new book, the market is his chosen subject and his several angles of observation combine to produce results as startling and revealing as ever. This is the market seen, as it were, from the soul outward."—Jack Miles, author of God: A Biography
