

Awards

Hoover Institution Awards Fellowships

The Hoover Institution on War, Revolution, and Peace at Stanford University recently named its 1997-1998 National Peace and Public Affairs Fellows. Six political scientists were among those receiving fellowships:

Fiona E.S. McGillivray, assistant professor, department of political science, Washington University. McGillivray holds the William C. Bark National Fellowship and will be working on a project titled "Comparative Institutions and Industry Import Relief."

Sharyn L. O'Halloran, associate professor, department of political science, Columbia University. O'Halloran holds the Robert Eckles Swain National Fellowship and will be working on a project titled "Procedural Protectionism: The Political Economy of U.S. Trade Policy."

Diana E. Richards, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Minnesota. Professor Richards holds the Susan Louise Dyer Peace Fellowship and will be working on a project titled "Negotiating International Agreements: The Role of Shared Knowledge."

Alastair M. Smith, assistant professor, department of political science, Washington University. Professor Smith holds the Edward Teller National Fellowship and will be working on a project titled "Strategic Behavior and Statistical Inference in the Escalation of Crises."

Wen Fang Tang, associate professor, University of Pittsburgh. Professor Tang will be working on a project titled "Sociopolitical Behavior and Attitudes in Taiwan and Mainland China."

Edward W. Walker, executive director, Program in Soviet and Post-Soviet Studies, University of California, Berkeley. Professor Walker will be working on a project titled "Secession and Autonomy in the Soviet Successor States."

Dirksen Center Awards 12 Research Grants

The Dirksen Congressional Center recently named winners of its 1997 Congressional Research Grants program. The winners were:

John Bader, University of California, Los Angeles

Stephen Borrelli and Terry Royed, University of Alabama

Martha Gibson, University of Connecticut

William Grover, Saint Michael's College (VT)

Terri Halperin, University of Virginia

William Hixon, University of Rochester

James Lindsay, University of Iowa

John Messmer, University of Missouri

Sharyn O'Halloran, Columbia University

Rosanna Peroti, Hofstra University

Bill Weinberg, Independent Writer

Clyde Wilcox, Georgetown University

Dissertation Awards for British Politics

The British Politics Groups, one of APSA's affiliated groups, named cowinners of its Samuel H. Beer Dissertation Award during the 1997 APSA Annual Meeting. This year's awardees were:

Jeffrey Pickering, Indiana University, "The Politics of Retrenchment: Twilight in Britain's Global Rule, 1945-1968."

Karl Ka-yu Ho, University of North Texas, "Dealignment Decades On: Partisanship and Party Support in Great Britain, 1979-1996."

Elshtain Named Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar for 1997-1998

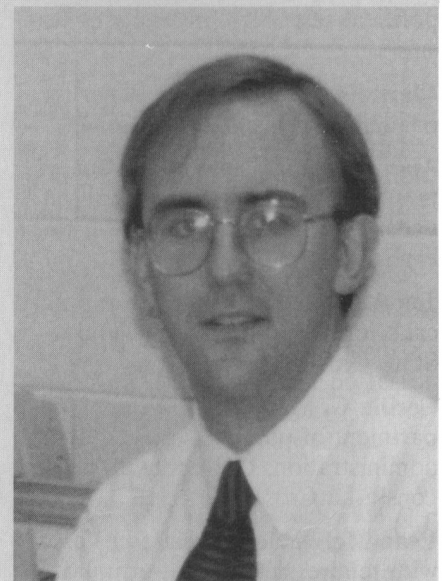

Jean Bethke Elshtain, Rockefeller Professor of Social and Political Ethics at the University of Chicago, has been named a Phi Beta Kappa Visit-

Kudos

Christopher Howard, assistant professor of government, College of William and Mary received the Society of the Alumni's Alumni Fellowship Award, which recognizes excellence in teaching by younger faculty. The award was established in 1968 specifically to reward young faculty members "whose classroom work has already achieved notoriety among students, colleagues, and staff."

Professor Howard joined the faculty of William and Mary in 1993, after receiving his Ph.D. in political science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. During his four years at the William and Mary, Howard has taught a variety of courses and published extensively, in addition to serving on several departmental and university committees. Among the seven different courses he has taught on the undergraduate and graduate level are "The American Welfare State," "Introduction to American Politics," "Research Methods," and "Budget Policy-Making."

Despite his heavy teaching load, Howard has found time to publish ten articles, one book, and several book reviews. His book, The Hidden Welfare State: Tax Expenditures and Social Policy in the United States, was published by Princeton University Press in 1997.

Christopher Howard

ing Scholar for 1997–1998. As a participant in the Visiting Scholar Program, Professor Elshain will travel to eight colleges and universities, including the University of California, University of the South, and Ursinus College, where she will spend two days meeting with students and faculty in formal and informal sessions. She will also give a public lecture at each institution she visits. Her lectures will cover such topics as “America’s Democracy at Century’s End,” “Democracy and Religion: What Tocqueville Knew,” and “Thinking About Bodies and Limits.”

Other Awards

Chandler Davidson, chair, department of sociology, and professor of sociology and political science, Rice University, was one of eight recipients of the George R. Brown Award for Superior Teaching given annually to Rice faculty. Recipients are chosen by a vote of alumni two years after graduation.

J. Patrick Dohel, professor and associate dean of the graduate school of public affairs at the University of Washington, had his “Managing in Divided Times: William Ruckelshaus and the Paradox of Independence” (Administration and Society, February 1995) chosen as the Best Article of 1995 in Public and Nonprofit Management by the Public and Nonprofit

Betty Glad

Section of the Academy of Management.

Kathleen Dolan, assistant professor of political science, University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, was awarded the 1997 Carrie Chapman Cart Prize for Research on Women and Politics, given annually by the Carrie Chapman Cart Center for Women and Politics at Iowa State University.

Roger Durham, assistant professor, department of political science, Aquinas College (MI), was named Outstanding Professor of the Year for 1996–1997.

Robert England, professor, department of political science, Oklahoma State University, was named Outstanding Oklahoma Political Scientist by the Oklahoma Political Science Association. England was recognized for his research on second-generation discrimination.

Joyce Gelb, professor, Center for the Study of Women and Society, received the Social Science Research Council’s “Japan” Award for a study of the impact the Equal Opportunity Law had in its first decade of operation.

Betty Glad, professor of political science, University of South Carolina, was presented the 1997 Harold D. Lasswell Award for distinguished scientific contributions to political psychology at the International Society for Political Psychology meeting in Krakow, Poland in August, 1997. In the award citation Glad was praised for her “research on ‘the psychological dimensions of war’ . . . and work on deterrence, the domino theory, and learning.”

Nancy Kassop, associate professor, department of political science, State University of New York at New Paltz, was named 1997 Liberal Arts and Sciences Teacher of the Year at SUNY-New Paltz.

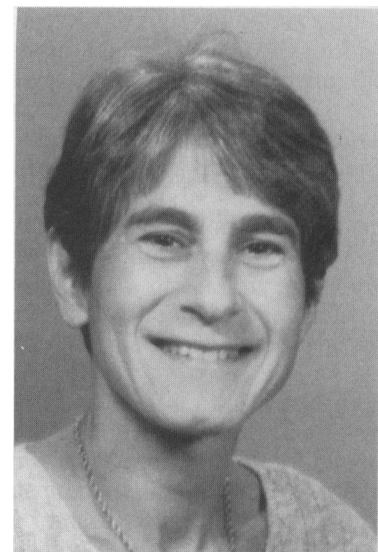

Robert O. Keohane, professor, department of political science, Duke University, received the Society for Women in Political Economy’s inaugural Mentor of the Year Award during a special reception held during APSA’s 1997 Annual Meeting. Keohane received the award in recognition of “his consistent and strong support for women in the fields of international relations theory and international political economy.”

Xiabo Lu, professor of political science, Barnard College of Columbia University, received the 1996–1997 Emily Gregory Award for Excellence in Teaching. The campuswide teaching award is named in honor of the first female professor to teach at Barnard College.

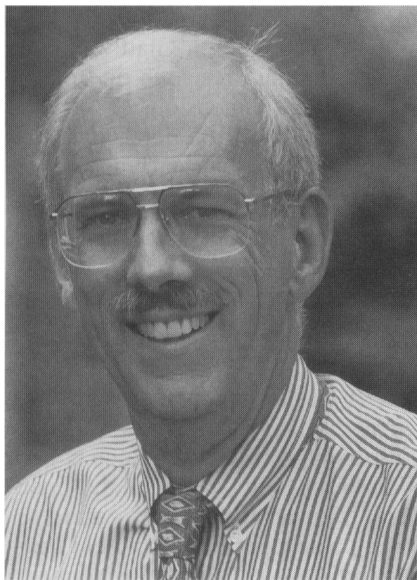

Albert Matheny, associate professor, department of political science, University of Florida, won the Florida Blue Key Distinguished Faculty Award.

Chandler Davidson

Nancy Kassop

Robert O. Keohane

James McAdams, professor of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame received the DAAD Prize for Distinguished Scholarship in German Studies. McAdams is the first political scientist to win the prize.

Suzanne Mettler, assistant professor, department of political science, Syracuse University, has been chosen to be a 1997–1998 National Academy of Education Spencer Postdoctoral Fellow.

Frank Meyers, professor, department of political science, State University of New York at Stony Brook, received the 1997 Hugh Cleland Memorial Outstanding Professor Award, which is given annually by the Stony Brook Alumni Association.

Michael A. Morris, professor, department of political science, Clemson University, won the Gordon K. Lewis Memorial Award for Caribbean Scholarship for his book Caribbean Maritime Security (St. Martin's Press, 1994). The award is given annually for the best book about the Caribbean published during the previous three-year period. Morris's book was praised for its usefulness to both scholars and policymakers.

Richard Scher, professor, department of political science, University of Florida, was awarded the Robin and Jean Gibson Term Professorship.

Steven B. Smith, professor, department of political science, Yale University, has been awarded the 1997 Ralph Waldo Emerson Prize presented by Phi Beta Kappa for his book, Spinoza, Liberalism, and the Question of Jewish Identity.

Eduardo A. Velasquez, assistant professor of politics, Washington and Lee University, received a fellowship for college teachers and independent scholars from the National Endowment for the Humanities. Velasquez will use the time to complete his book "The Character of Liberalism."

Peter Watkins, associate professor of political science and chair, department of economics, history, and political science, Saint Joseph's College, was co-recipient of the College's 1997 Teaching Excellence Award.

Nikolaos Zahariadis, assistant professor, department of political science, State University of New York at New Paltz, received the 1997 Distinguished Teacher of the Year Award, which is given annually by the Alumni Association of SUNY-New Paltz.

Suisheng Zhao, assistant professor of government and East Asian politics at Colby College, won Choice magazine's 1997 Outstanding Academic Book Award for Power Competition in East Asia: From the Old Chinese World Order to Post-Cold War Regional Security (St. Martin's Press). Professor Zhao also was awarded a 1997–1998 Fellowship by the University Professors Program of Boston University to conduct research for his forthcoming book on Chinese nationalism.