FAGGE'S
PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF MEDICINE

IS NOW READY.

Two Vols., 8vo, cloth, 36s.; half-Persian, marbled edges, 42s.

THIS work is based on laborious researches into the pathological and clinical records of Guy's Hospital during the twenty years in which the author held office there as Medical Registrar, as Pathologist, and as Physician.

It has been edited by Dr. Pye-Smith, Physician to Guy's Hospital, who has also written the section on Cutaneous Diseases. Dr. Wilks has contributed the chapter on Affections of the Valves of the Heart. These two subjects had not been completed by Dr. Fagge.

The Sections on "Diseases of the Nervous System" occupy 444 closely printed pages.

It will probably be admitted to be a fuller, more original, and more elaborate text-book on medicine than has yet appeared.
