

NEW AND NOTEWORTHY FROM KODANSHA

MEMORIES OF SILK AND STRAW

A Self-Portrait of Small-Town Japan

Dr. JUNICHI SAGA · Translated by Garry O. Evans

Visit a small town in Japan in the days long before the changes brought on by modernization. There are over 50 stories, from the blacksmith and the tofu maker to the apprentice geisha and the local gangster, all recorded by the town's local doctor. Colorful and enjoyable anecdotes are a wealth of information, and illustrations on almost every page complete the picture of a way of life that has virtually disappeared. To read this history is to understand the heart of Japan, not simply the high-tech society that is so often portrayed in today's media. $22.95

The Archaeology of Ancient China

Fourth Edition, Revised and Enlarged
K.C. Chang

This new edition of K.C. Chang's now-standard text incorporates the latest information that has become available since the end of the Cultural Revolution. Chang has rewritten and reorganized the material, using a new format to discuss the period from the early humans and their Palaeolithic cultures to the rise and development of the earliest civilizations around 1000 B.C.

"Required reading not only for any archaeologist even remotely interested in East Asia but also for any historian aiming to understand ancient China." —Harvard Journal of Asiatic Studies (on an earlier edition) 337 illus. New in cloth ($50.00) and paper ($17.95)

The Qashqa'i of Iran

Lois Beck

In a book that Gene R. Garthwaite has called "a milestone in Iranian studies," Lois Beck provides the first full-scale historical and anthropological account of the Qashqa'i, a nomadic people who occupy a strategic area between the Persian Gulf and the major population centers of Iran. Her analysis of the connections over the past three centuries between the Qashqa'i tribal confederacy and the Iranian state will revise leading theories on tribe-state relations. $30.00

Social Origins of Distress and Disease

Depression, Neurasthenia, and Pain in Modern China

Arthur Kleinman, M.D.

Kleinman, the first American to conduct psychiatric research in the People's Republic of China since 1949, opens a window on the experiences of individual Chinese in their relations with family and state, and at the same time makes cross-cultural comparisons between Chinese and Western interpretations of pain and despair.

The Rise of American Air Power

The Creation of Armageddon

Michael S. Sherry

A noted Sinologist provides the first in-depth history of American strategic bombing. With impressive sweep and vigor Michael Sherry explores the growing appeal of air power in America before World War II, describes the campaign of fire bombing against Japanese cities during the war, and traces the origins of the dangerous illusion that the bombing of cities would be so horrific that nations would not dare let it occur. His book is a major contribution to military, intellectual, and political history. 25 illus. $29.95

TOWARDS CAPITALIST RESTORATION?

Chinese Socialism after Mao

Michel Chossudovsky "offers a critique of the conventional interpretation of what has happened in China during the post-1949 period. After examining the early years of Communist rule, he focuses on the reforms which the Deng Xiaoping leadership has been attempting to implement since 1979.... he presents a healthy and much needed critique of the tendency for China watchers to accept the present leadership's line concerning its own reforms and the evils of the preceding government." —

Michael Leifer, editor. "[A] very useful volume that consists of 12 lectures on the countries of East Asia, their interrelationships and their separate relations with the Soviet Union and the US. The book is both a study in the current balance of power in the area and an intriguing look at the concept of regionalism as practiced there.... [The lectures] are uniformly excellent and informative. Major themes include the evolving Sino-American relationship; the emergence of Japan as a true world state; Soviet relations with China, Japan, and Korea; the continuing struggle within Indochina; and the complexities of the Association of South East Asian Nations."—Choice

ENERGY, SECURITY AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IN EAST ASIA

Ronald C. Keith, editor. Japan, South Korea and Taiwan—the strong capitalist economies of East Asia, and all hopelessly energy deficient—import over 80% of their energy resources. The three major communist countries in the region—the Soviet Union, Mainland China and Vietnam—however, have considerable energy reserves which they have so far not exploited to any great degree, partly because they lack the necessary technical and capital inputs. This book examines the energy situation in each country, surveys the sources of supply and shows how foreign policy has been directed towards safeguarding supply. It also explores how the situation has changed over time, concentrating on the period from the late 1960s, including the two oil price shocks, and through to the present.

ARMS CONTROL IN ASIA

Gerald Segal, editor. In these nine essays, area specialists discuss the issue of arms control in Asia within the context of recent conflicts on the continent. After analyzing the causes and evolution of specific conflicts between China and the Soviet Union, the Koreans, Southeast Asians, and India and Pakistan, the contributors assess the special types of arms control favored by Asian states and offer new perspectives on confidence building measures, demilitarization, and the uses of tacit over formal agreements.

JAPAN RE-ARMED

Malcolm McIntosh. Will Japan re-arm? Or has it eschewed a major defense commitment to avoid provoking either the Soviet Union or the ASEAN countries? Taking into account Japan's position in a potentially volatile region of the world (as illustrated by the downing of Korean airliner 007) this volume seeks to answer these important questions and to consider the future of Japanese defense. McIntosh argues that Japan has enough destroyers, frigates and tanks to rank fifth in the world. This clearly written analysis also explores the circumstances which have forced Japan into the role of a superpower.

"These records are an invaluable source of information on Japan. The State Department and American embassy and consulates in Japan boasted some of the most insightful observers of the Japanese scene, and their reports and enclosures give important glimpses of Japan's political, commercial, and cultural life. The files will be particularly useful for an understanding of the ways in which foreign crises and war transformed, and in turn were transformed by, Japanese politics and society."

The Butcher’s Wife

Translated by Howard Goldblatt and Ellen Yeung

Based on a homicide that occurred in Shanghai during World War II, this controversial novel is the harrowing story of a young peasant woman who is driven by her brutal husband and a superstitious society to madness and finally to murder. Since winning first prize in the United Daily News’s fiction contest in 1983, The Butcher’s Wife has been the subject of both praise and condemnation.

FROM PRINCETON

Brocade River Poems

Selected Works of the Tang Dynasty

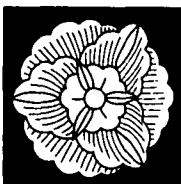

Courtesan Xue Tao

Translated by Jeanne Larsen

Xue Tao (A.D. 768–831) was well known as a poet in an age when all men of learning were poets — and almost all women were illiterate. As an entertainer and official government hostess, she met, and impressed, many of the most talented and powerful figures of her day. As a maker of beautiful paper and a Taoist churchwoman, she maintained a life of independence and aesthetic sensibility. As a writer, she created a body of work that is by turns deeply moving, amusing, thought-provoking. Drawing knowledgeably on a rich literary tradition, she created images that here live again for the contemporary reader of English.

Fire Across the Sea

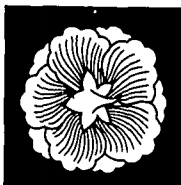

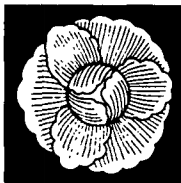

The Vietnam War and Japan, 1965–1975

Thomas R. H. Havens

“This book is a rich portrait of a society in flux. Thomas Havens demonstrates the often profound effects of the Vietnam War on Japanese politics, culture, economy, and foreign relations between 1965 and 1975. No one has written anything like this in terms of its comprehensiveness and historical perspective.”

Epidemics and Mortality in Early Modern Japan

Ann Bowman Jannetta

Ann Jannetta demonstrates that epidemic diseases, which took an enormous toll in early modern Europe, were much less threatening in Japan during the same period. The two and one-half centuries of peace and stability known as the Pax Tokugawa (1600–1868) were also characterized by relatively low and stable mortality. Dr. Jannetta finds no evidence that bubonic plague, which periodically devastated Europe from the fourteenth to the seventeenth centuries, was epidemic in Japan. Smallpox was the biggest killer, infecting virtually every child before the age of five, but measles was rarely seen. Epidemics of dysentery, typhus, and cholera were uncommon before the mid-nineteenth century.

Law and Social Change in Postwar Japan

Frank K. Upham

This excellent introduction to the legal culture of Japan is the first Western book to take law seriously as an integral part of the dynamics of Japanese business and society, and to show how an informal legal system can work in a complex industrial democracy.

"In this book, Frank Upham pushes forward the frontiers of knowledge of legal processes in Japan. By examining four critical cases — environmental tragedy, the struggle for Buraku liberation, the search for equal employment opportunity, and conflict over industrial policy — he pierces the myth that Japan is a simple, nonlitigious, consensual society. Upham shows how disaffected groups in Japan can use legal means to press their case to achieve a better settlement and how leaders can use law to influence society through conscious choice." — Ezra F. Vogel
