

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

DAVID BRERETON is Lecturer in the Legal Studies Department at LaTrobe University in Australia. He is currently working on a study of the Australian Arbitration Commission.

JONATHAN D. CASPER is Professor of Political Science at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign. His research interests in recent years have focused on criminal courts.

RICHARD J. MAIMAN is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Southern Maine. He has written on juvenile court organizations and on press freedom. With Professor McEwen, he is currently working on a book-length treatment of their Maine small claims mediation research.

DOUGLAS W. MAYNARD is Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, Madison. His general research interest is in the area of naturally occurring interaction. He has written a number of reports on plea bargaining and is the author of the forthcoming monograph, Inside Plea Bargaining (Plenum Press).

CRAIG A. McEWEN is Associate Professor of Sociology and Chair of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at Bowdoin College. He has contributed to the Annual Review of Sociology and is author of Designing Correctional Organizations for Youths.

ALISSA A. POLLITZ is a graduate student in Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Her current research interests include police responses to family disputes and judicial implementation of the North Carolina Safe Roads Act.

TOM R. TYLER is Assistant Professor in the Psychology and Political Science Departments at Northwestern University. His research has been concerned with the psychology of juries.

ROBERT E. WORDEN is a graduate student in Political Science at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. His interests lie in the fields of public policy and public administration; he is currently investigating the political and administrative constraints on police behavior.

The Law and Society Association has begun its search for the next editor of the Law & Society Review. The next editor's term will commence about July 1, 1985 with responsibility for Volume 20 of the Review. Editors' terms usually run for three years. Suggestions for this post should be sent to the Chair of the Selection Committee, Professor Richard Abel at UCLA Law School, Los Angeles, California 90024.