

Philosophy of Science

December, 1978

EDITORIAL

In the September 1977 issue of Philosophy of Science, I announced that we would tentatively schedule a special issue for December 1978 devoted to the philosophy of psychology. We did receive a number of contributions but the schedule was such that only two essays were completed in time for this issue. This is not, therefore, a special issue. The journal will, of course, remain open to further contributions in this area, and several which were received too late to be placed in the December number will appear in the 1979 volume.
