📖 The Simon Wiesenthal Center Annual is a scholarly publication focusing on the study of the Holocaust, including essays on the Holocaust in its widest context: Nazi Germany and the Final Solution 1933–1945; problems of rescue, refugees, and immigration; modern and contemporary anti-Semitism; and postwar issues such as displaced persons and the trials of the Nazi criminals.

Contributors to Volume I (1983) are Solon Beinfeld, Christopher Browning, John Conway, Henry Friedlander, Alex Grobman, Yisrael Gutman, Lawrence Langer, Sybil Milton, Joan Miriam Ringelheim, Alvin Rosenfeld, and Efraim Zuroff. The scope of the eleven articles ranges from consideration of cultural life in the Vilna Ghetto to new areas such as women and the Holocaust, photography of the Holocaust, and the trial of Nazi criminals in postwar Germany.

Editors Sybil Milton and Henry Friedlander solicit papers for Volumes II (1984) and III (1985). Please submit all articles to Gerald Margolis, Managing Editor, Simon Wiesenthal Center, 9760 West Pico Boulevard, Los Angeles, California 90035.

📖 The Leo Baeck Institute and the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) announce the LBI/DAAD Fellowship 1984, available for doctoral students or recent Ph.D.'s affiliated with an accredited American institution of higher education. American citizenship is required. The purpose of the fellowship is to assist doctoral students in their dissertation or academics in the preparation of a scholarly essay or book within the field of study served by LBI, i.e., the social, communal, and intellectual history of German-speaking Jewry. It provides either stipends for research work at the LBI in New York or grants for a period of research in libraries, archives, or research institutions in the Federal Republic of Germany. Applications for the fellowship must be submitted in writing to the Secretary of the LBI not later than March 31, 1984. For further information, guidelines, and application forms, please contact the Leo Baeck Institute, 129 East 73rd St., New York, New York 10021, Tel.: (212) 744-6400.
