Studies in International Law have become an international science in the sense that no one can restrict himself to the study of literature of his own country alone. Only a few scholars are in a position to peruse the enormous amount of data, treaties, decisions, and literature published throughout the world, and on the basis of all this are able to sketch a comprehensive picture of International Law, without giving disproportionate treatment to local aspects, and without being biased by national or ideological prejudices. The reviews of the standard work in German of the West Berlin Professor Wilhelm Wengler by leading exponents of International Law in Europe indicate that his book has avoided just those pitfalls. The book affords ample treatment of all the essential factors in general or regional International Law. Its comprehensive bibliography is designed to assist the reader in coming completely to grips with the whole range of material from several languages on each particular topic. A factor of equal importance is the manner in which Professor Wengler has placed many questions in a completely new light. As Professor Schwarzenberger (London) puts it, no discussion of particular questions of International Law can now validly be investigated without drawing on the advice of this work. Professors Schwarzenberger and Rousseau (Paris) each independently came to the conclusion that the book is an "epoch-making event in International Law."

THE USE OF EXPERTS BY INTERNATIONAL TRIBUNALS

Gillian White

Conceived when the author, undertaking research for a large corporation engaged in international litigations involving the use of experts, could find no source book dealing with the problem, this down-to-earth study should stand for years as the essential work in this area of international law.

Chapter titles are: Expert Aid and the Nature of International Proceedings; Use of Experts by Municipal Courts; Competence of International Tribunals To Call Upon Experts—Express Competence; Competence of International Tribunals To Call Upon Experts—Implied Competence; Boundary Cases; Determination of Facts Which, if Established, Would Give Rise to International Responsibility; Questions of Valuation and Damages; Settling a Regime for the Future; the Role of Experts; Privileges and Immunities of Experts; Fees and Expenses.

Bibliography, appendices, notes, table of cases.

THE ROLE OF DOMESTIC COURTS IN THE INTERNATIONAL LEGAL ORDER

Richard A. Falk

"This well-written book . . . discusses an already controversial subject in a highly provocative manner. Because Professor Falk's underlying thesis was adopted last Spring by the United States Supreme Court in Banco Nacional de Cuba v Sabbatino, his book is both timely and important. . . . Professor Falk's reasoning has already made a considerable jurisprudential impact upon contemporary legal history."—Frank Griffith Dawson, New York City.

"Worthy of careful consideration by all students of International legal problems."—MICHAEL KATZ, Advocate to the Supreme Court of South Africa.

Security in Disarmament

By RICHARD A. FALK and
RICHARD J. BARNET, editors

WHAT are the risks of arms control and disarmament? How can they be reduced or eliminated? What are the political implications of drastic disarmament? This volume, composed of studies by eleven experts in various aspects of arms control and disarmament, seeks to answer these questions. The book deals with three major aspects of the problem: how to get the disarmament process started, and once started, to continue it; how to retain the freedom of diplomatic action that might be needed to defend national interests in a disarming world; how to approach the problems of political security in a fully disarmed world. 450 pages. $10.00
