The Pan-African Nation

Oil and the Spectacle of Culture in Nigeria

Andrew Apter

"This is an important book on an important topic. In The Pan-African Nation, Andrew Apter exposes FESTAC '77 as a foundational cultural moment. Here, FESTAC becomes both a way of thinking about nation-building, and also a way of linking specific cultural forms to the political economy of oil. This is a provocative interrogation of the question of culture and its relation to the nation."

Gallery Bundu

A Story about an African Past

Paul Stoller

"Ethnographer Stoller turns again to fiction in this largely autobiographical tale of memory, longing, and regret. . . . Richly filled with the heat, odors, and cadences of Nigerian life, its inexorable traditions and powerful magic, this short literary novel captures the spirit of Africa and brings a small part of it back to America with its transformed narrator."—Booklist

Dilemmas of Culture in African Schools

Youth, Nationalism, and the Transformation of Knowledge

Cati Coe

"In Dilemmas of Culture in African Schools, Cati Coe examines the social and political consequences of overlapping systems of knowledge production in contemporary Ghana. This is an engrossing study that raises many compelling questions about educational processes, state-society relations, nationalism, cultural pluralism and cultural policy, the production of knowledge, and the production of citizens."—Kelly M. Askew, author of Performing the Nation

Madumo, a Man Bewitched

Adam Ashforth

"A fascinating page-turner that recounts one man's battle with an eerie symptom of powerlessness: obsession with witchcraft. . . . Ashforth enfolds his readers in this distressing story . . . [and] also offers a persuasive analysis of the broader sociological phenomenon that, he argues, Madumo's tribulations exemplify."—Voice Literary Supplement

We Are Fighting the World

A History of the Marashea Gangs in South Africa, 1947–1999

Gary Kynoch

Since the late 1940s, a migrant criminal society, known as the Marashea, has operated around South Africa's gold-mining compounds. This book explores how it prospered during the apartheid era and how its involvement in political conflict today is critical to understanding the violent crime epidemic in contemporary South Africa.

African Womanhood in Colonial Kenya

Tabitha Kanogo

"Kanogo shows how African and British male authorities tried, with uncertain opinions and from different perspectives, to control female initiatives, and how, to very varying degrees, women managed to achieve increasing measures of control over their own lives."—John Lonsdale

288 pages, cloth $49.95, paper $24.95

African Underclass

Urbanization, Crime & Colonial Order in Dar es Salaam, 1919–61

Andrew Burton

African Underclass examines the social, political, and administrative repercussions of rapid urbanization in colonial Dar es Salaam, and the evolution of official policy that viewed urbanization as inextricably linked with social disorder.

Crisis and Decline in Bunyoro

Population and Environment in Western Uganda, 1860–1955

Shane Doyle

The Kingdom of Bunyoro's story demonstrates convincingly that environmental change was not a uniform, statewide process but was as much about the differential impact of conflict on society as it was about the uneven extraction and distribution of resources.

POSITION ANNOUNCEMENT

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR IN SOCIOCULTURAL ANTHROPOLOGY

The Department of Anthropology at the University of California, Davis invites applications for a tenure-track Assistant Professorship in the social and cultural anthropology of Sub-Saharan Africa. Applicants must have completed the Ph.D. by July 1, 2006. Theoretical, topical and regional specializations are open, but the Department seeks, among others, specialists in medical anthropology, particularly the culture of sex and reproduction in the context of AIDS; popular culture, youth, mass media, and African cities; states, quasi-states and the social production of security and insecurity in the context of international humanitarian aid and Non-Governmental Organizations. Innovative use of combined methodologies—ethnographic, historical, and geographic—is encouraged. Those trained in allied disciplines such as Geography, Political Science, History, and Sociology will be considered when ethnography represents a significant component of candidates' research.

UC Davis has a tradition of excellence in undergraduate teaching, and the Department of Anthropology has a strong record of graduate education. The successful applicant must be willing and able to participate in both. Teaching duties will include the normal load of four courses per academic year (quarter system), undergraduate and graduate advising, and supervision of graduate and undergraduate student research. UC Davis and the Department of Anthropology are interested in candidates who are committed to the highest standards of scholarship and professional activity, and to the development of a campus climate that supports equality and diversity.

Applications must be received by November 4, 2005 to be assured of consideration in the first round. This position is open until filled. Please send a statement of research and teaching interests, a CV, a copy of at least one publication or work in progress, along with the names and e-mail addresses of four referees to: Donald L. Donham, Chair of the Sociocultural Anthropology Search Committee, Dept. of Anthropology, One Shields Avenue, University of California, Davis, CA 95616.

The University of California, Davis, and the Department of Anthropology are interested in candidates who are committed to the highest standards of scholarship and professional activities, and to the development of a campus climate that supports equality and diversity. The University of California is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action institution and prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation/preference and gender identity/expression. This employer offers employment benefits to domestic partners of employees.

THE DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY AT THE UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH

African History

African History. The Department of History at the University of Pittsburgh is seeking applicants for a tenure-stream faculty position at the Assistant Professor level beginning fall 2006, pending budgetary approval. Ph.D. should be completed by September 1, 2006. We seek a specialist in African history to teach graduate and undergraduate courses. We invite applications from candidates working on any country or region within Africa, on any time period. The appointee will join a department with significant strengths in non-Western history and a commitment to a transnational, thematic emphasis in graduate training. We encourage applicants to demonstrate how their research and teaching interests will contribute to one or more of our transnational concentrations: Atlantic History; Capitalism and Empire; Comparative Political Cultures; Race, Ethnicity, Gender; Texts and Contexts. (For more information on these themes, see our website, <http://www.pitt.edu/~pitthist/graduate/transnational.html>.) In addition to scholarly accomplishments, the department expects and values excellence in teaching. Send letter of application, summary of dissertation or book, CV, graduate transcript(s), and three letters of recommendation to Africa Search Committee, Department of History, University of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh, PA 15260. Deadline for applications is October 14, 2005. The University of Pittsburgh is an Affirmative Action, Equal Opportunity employer. Women and members of minority groups under-represented in academia are especially encouraged to apply.

Top Ten Reasons to Become an ASA Member

1. Members attend the Annual Meeting, which has grown into one of the largest annual gatherings of Africanists in the world. The meetings include keynote lectures, panels and roundtable discussions on topics of major importance; publishers' exhibits of the latest books in African studies with representatives available to discuss publishing possibilities; and the presentation of eight awards ranging from book awards to recognition of lifetime achievement. The Annual Meeting also includes showings of latest documentaries and feature films from and about Africa; job placement services; receptions for faculty, students and alumni of African studies programs at major universities; and two very popular events: the welcome reception and the dance party.
2. Members can nominate international scholars to obtain funding to enable them to attend the Annual Meeting.
3. Members receive subscriptions to two leading African studies journals, the African Studies Review, and African Issues, and the professional bulletin, ASA News. Members also receive a discount on History in Africa and the Canadian Journal of African Studies as well as on a wide variety of other ASA Press publications. For a current listing of publication offerings, see http://www.africanstudies.org/asa_publicationslist.htm.
4. Some 38 scholarly, professional and activist organizations currently maintain connections with the ASA and many hold their business meetings at the ASA Annual Meeting.
5. The ASA initiates special projects to support international research collaborations with African scholars in higher education. The ASA promotes networking and mutually advantageous research collaborations. For example, the ASA has supported the development of a website <http://www.isp.msu.edu/AfricanStudies/AEJP/> that provides African scholars access to international journals on Africa. In addition, with funding from the Rockefeller Foundation, the ASA has supported the development of a higher education resource directory; see <http://www.africa.msu.edu/AUP/>.
6. The ASA represents the interests of professionals and scholars of Africa and African studies and seeks to broaden opportunities in the field.
7. The ASA seeks to increase public understanding of Africa through the media and other fora.
8. The ASA provides support to those who teach about Africa at all levels, from K-12 to institutions of higher learning.
9. The ASA promotes linkages with African-American scholarly, activist, professional, and local communities that are interested in the study of Africa.
10. The ASA makes funds available annually to assist groups with shipping costs for book donations to African libraries and schools.

The ASA invites all who would like to participate in these activities to join. The ASA welcomes members from North America and around the world. A membership form may be found on the ASA's new online database at www.africanstudies.org

Within a few weeks of joining the ASA you will receive a welcome packet that includes a brochure that provides information about the ASA's services and governance, and that suggests ways in which you can participate in the ASA activities. You will also in due course begin to receive copies of African Issues, the ASA News, and the African Studies Review.

If you have any questions about joining the ASA, please call 732-932-8173 or send an email to members@rci.rutgers.edu.
