SELECTED READINGS IN ECONOMICS

by C. LOWELL HARRISS, Columbia University

Presents distinguished, complementary outside readings to go with any basic text and provide a complete, inexpensive package. It makes reference to libraries and other sources unnecessary. Especially useful as a supplemental text for all basic courses in Economics. Contents include: What is Economics, The Business System, Costs and Prices, Dealing with Monopoly, Consumption and Consumer Problems. Adequate coverage is given for every important topic, and by many contemporary economists.

PRINCIPLES OF ECONOMIC POLICY

by KENNETH E. BOULDING, University of Michigan

A basic text for any course dealing with economic policy. Requires no prerequisites. The purpose of the book is to develop first, the principles and then to relate these principles to basic areas of economic policy. The first part of the book discusses four basic objectives of economic policy: progress, stability, justice and freedom. The second part discusses the extent to which these four objectives may be achieved in a number of different policy areas (i.e. fiscal, monetary, international economic policy, etc.)

Approx. 480 pp. • 5½" x 8½" Pub. Jan. '58 • Text price $5.95

THE FAR EAST, 3rd Edition

by PAUL H. CLYDE, Duke University

A history of the invasion of Eastern Asia, principally during the past century, by the dynamic and expanding civilization of the West, both European and American. In scope and content the book is both comprehensive and selective. Since the Western impact was an astonishingly complex movement, this is an introduction to a vast array of component movements: commercial, religious, political, economic, social, and cultural. It describes the Far Eastern scenes on which the Western movements played; portrays the disintegration of Eastern institutions and life under the Western influence, and tells how Eastern peoples responded to the resulting revolutions that engulfed them. Being historical, the study is presented as a chronological narrative.

800 pp. • 5½" x 8½" Pub. Feb. 1958 • Text price $7.95
