

Contents

General Editor's Preface	page xi
Acknowledgements	xiv
Prologue: The Difficult Question of What Family Is About	I
1 Family as Mystery	12
'What Is Family About?' As a Basic, Open and Neutral Moral Question	16
A Focus Regarding Family: Givenness and Dependence	21
The Current State of the Family	27
Family as a Moral Problem	39
Marcel: Approaching Family as Mystery	54
A Mystery Approach as a Theological Contribution to Family Research	66
The Mystery Approach of This Book	78
2 The Family Tie as Mystery	86
Family Ties in Sophocles' Antigone	89
Judith Butler's Trouble Reading Antigone in View of Family	104
The Ethical Complexity of Hegel's View of Family	118
Hegel and the Unreflective Morality of Family	133
Conclusion: The Unnameable Family Tie and the Divine Law	146
3 Family and Givenness as Mystery	153
Rembrandt's Image of an Ordinary Family Scene	155
Givenness as Natural: Almond and Browning	170
Recent Anthropology's View of Kinship as Made	189
Conclusion: Family as a 'Strong Image' and Taking Givenness Actively	215
4 Family and Dependence as Mystery	225
Hosea's Lived Image of an Adulterous Family	228
Acknowledging Dependence and a Suspicion against Family in Current (Care) Ethics	243
Constructive Approaches to Family as Revealing Fundamental Dependence: Friedrich Schleiermacher and Jean Lacroix	263
Conclusion: Overcoming the Impasses of Dependence by Mystery	279

Epilogue: Morality of Appeal and Answer	288
Ethics and Everyday Life	288
The Sacred Character of Family as Mystery	295
Family as Mystery: Appeal and Answer	299
 Bibliography	 305
Index	317