South Asian Texts in History: Critical Engagements with Sheldon Pollock

This book presents for the first time an overview of the groundbreaking contributions of Sheldon Pollock to South Asia scholarship over the past three decades while offering a set of critiques of key elements of his theories. This volume will make a signal contribution to the modern study of South Asia by engaging on many levels with the ideas of a scholar who has revolutionized our understanding of Indian cultural history. Pollock has trained and inspired a new generation of scholars, many of whom have contributed to this volume. The essays are organized into five groups that reflect the major domains of Pollock's immense contributions to the field: the epic Ramayana, Sanskrit literature and literary theory, systematic thought in premodern South Asia, the birth of a new vernacular cultural order in the subcontinent during the second millennium CE, and India's early modernity.

EAST ASIAN HISTORY: A Tripolar Approach and ANCIENT KOREA-JAPAN RELATIONS: Paekche and the Origin of the Yamato Dynasty

(Kudara: 2010)

by Wontack Hong, Professor Emeritus, Seoul National University

that were reviewed as

"His most important contribution to the field so far is the fresh two-volume set comprising one volume on the general history of East Asia and the other on the specific sphere of issues connected with the protohistorical relations between Korea and Japan. These books deserve special recognition not only for their insightful approach but also for their elegant design, with high-quality color pictures, maps, and extracts from primary sources integrated in the whole in a reader-friendly way.

The first of the two volumes is essentially a handbook of East Asian political and cultural history, chronologically arranged, and with a focus on Manchuria, historiographically the most neglected component of the tripolar complex. ... By the "tripolar approach" he means that East Asia should not be viewed from the traditional Sinocentric perspective (= the monopolar approach), nor in a framework involving China and "the unified nomads in the steppe" (= the bipolar approach), but, rather, in terms of a system of interaction between three actors of equal weight, but with different roles: China, Mongolia, and Manchuria. This is a holistic framework conceptualized by Gari Ledyard and Thomas Barfield (as well as by the present author), and as a model for understanding East Asian history it does not seem to have alternatives. Even so, much research is still being done on East Asia in the spirit of obsolete paradigms, which is why Hong's two books certainly serve a purpose as a healthy reminder of how things can also be seen. ... that make the reading of Hong's books so refreshing.

The second volume by Hong is more strictly focused on the protohistorical period, though it also has a modern political dimension. The principal objective of the book is to bring forth evidence in favor of the "Kudara-Yamato model," according to which the immediate origins of Yamato Japan were located in Paekche. The evidence itself is generally well known, extending from historical records to obvious cultural and archaeological parallels, but the problem is that the relevant facts have never been recognized by the Japanese national historiography. This forces Hong to criticize "the claustrophobic narrowness of the Japanese academic tradition" as a whole, a criticism that is certainly justified at least as far as the fields of archaeology and history are concerned. ... The role of Paekche in the early history of Japan is beyond any doubt. ... The political and military ties between Paekche and Yamato suggest an intimate partnership that is best explained by assuming an ethnic affinity. Hong must be right when he claims that "a member of the Paekche royal family carried out the conquest of the Yamato region in the late fourth century," thus laying the foundations of Japan as a political state. Much of Hong's book is devoted to the summarizing of the archaeological, historical, folkloric, and even onomastic evidence in favor of this claim. ... Hong's two books are, in general, much better argued than anything presented by Japanese historians or even linguists during the recent decades."

Lost Colony

The Untold Story of China's First Great Victory over the West
Tonio Andrade

"You can read this book as an exciting novel full of pirates, swashbuckling characters, beheadings, treachery, and battles on land and sea—a novel that just happens to be true—or as a revelatory look at the little-known first war between China and the West, and window into one of the biggest unsolved questions of world history: why Europe rather than China colonized the world from the time of Columbus onward. Either way, you will be sorry when you reach the last page."

Why America Spends While the World Saves
Sheldon Garon

"This is an important and timely book. "This is an important and novel book about a widespread Chinese problem: poverty. No other book profiles a social class of people, and the ideas and culture that surround them, so well and so decisively. With first-rate research and previously underutilized archival material, Guilty of Indigence completes our picture of urban China in a vital and dynamic fashion."

COLLECTING ASIA: East Asian Libraries in North America, 1868–2008

Peter X. Zhou, Editor

An essential book for all scholars of East Asia

Written by leading East Asia specialists, librarians, and scholars, Collecting Asia offers a fascinating look at the founding and development of twenty-five major East Asian libraries in North America. This unique volume provides us with a look at the events and people that shaped these collections. Through carefully documented histories, we are introduced to the pioneering figures—from collector-explorers to scholar-librarians—who were instrumental in bringing books and artifacts from Asia to North America. This history of acquisition provides remarkable insight into our cultural legacies.

East Asia libraries featured in this landmark volume include those of:

Library of Congress • Harvard University • University of California, Berkeley • Columbia University • Yale University • University of Michigan • Princeton University • University of Chicago • Cornell University • University of British Columbia • University of Washington • University of California, Los Angeles • Stanford University • University of Toronto • University of Pittsburgh • University of Hawaii • Indiana University • Ohio State University • University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign • University of Kansas • University of Pennsylvania • University of California, San Diego • Duke University • University of Minnesota • University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill

Richly illustrated and engagingly written, Collecting Asia is a vital book for scholars, librarians, students, and anyone with an interest in Asia and the history behind these important collections.

NEW SERIES EDITOR | Victor H. Mair

The Sinophone world refers to Sinitic-language cultures and communities born of colonial and postcolonial histories on the margins of geopolitical nation-states all across the world.

This series has evolved from the Culture, Literature, & Religion in Greater China Book Series, originally started by Jianmei Liu and Ann Huss and later included Xiaofei Kang. All three remain on the editorial board for the series, which has produced exemplary books that have garnered excellent reviews.

Given the growth and mission of the series, Cambria Press is proud to announce that Victor H. Mair (University of Pennsylvania) is now the editor of the series, which will henceforth be known as the Cambria Sinophone World Series to herald its new leadership and vision.

Key Issues in Asian Studies

Japan and Imperialism, 1853–1945

James L. Huffman

"James L. Huffman offers a lucid chronological account of Japan's experience first as a target and then as an increasingly committed practitioner of imperialism. He provides an eminently accessible and richly illustrated narrative, with due attention to key interpretive issues, that is wonderfully suited for classroom use. An especially attractive feature of the work is the way each chapter opens with a personal vignette of a victim, a critic, or an agent of imperialism and its effects—giving a tangible, human form to one of the defining forces that shaped modern Japan and its international relations through World War II."

Zen Past and Present

Eric Cunningham

What exactly is Zen? How and why did a belief system predicated on the assertion that words are not the answer spread first through many Asian cultures and ultimately to the West? Eric Cunningham does a superb job of enabling students—and those of us who teach them—to get a handle on these questions. Readers will gain a good understanding of Zen's history, the fundamental tenets of major Zen sects and of the belief system's influence on premodern East Asia, particularly Japan. Cunningham explores Zen's changing role in the Japan of the Meiji and Shōwa eras and chronicles its transmission to the West and subsequent transformation into a high profile popular cultural phenomenon.

Key Issues in Asian Studies

Japanese Popular Culture and Globalization

William M. Tsutsui

"The riotous, rich and multilayered nature of Japanese popular culture is crisply presented in this delightful overview. Hardcore student fans, bewildered teachers, and clueless scholars will all benefit from the way William Tsutsui makes sense of the diverse styles, narratives and images surfacing in manga, anime, TV drama, music, and cinema. Professor Tsutsui's engaging guide to some of the most important themes, historical threads, and scholarly theories found in such a vast cultural domain is guaranteed to charm readers and to enhance our appreciation of its irresistible appeal and global reach."

CONTACT INFORMATION FOR MANUSCRIPT SUBMISSION

Please contact the editorial office with inquiries about material for possible publication and correspondence to the Editor:

Jeffrey Wasserstrom, Editor, Journal of Asian Studies
University of California, Irvine
E-Mail: jas@journalofasianstudies.org
Phone: 949-824-6521
Fax: 949-824-2865

Completed manuscripts may be sent electronically to the above address.

Please send all books for review to the Association office in Ann Arbor; see Contact Information: Books for Review below.

REQUIREMENTS FOR MANUSCRIPT SUBMISSION

When preparing a manuscript, please note that JAS is committed to publishing articles based on in-depth, original research. Authors should also take care to address the interests of our broad, multidisciplinary readership by raising larger questions of interest that reach beyond their precise research specialties. Authors are encouraged to consult recent issues of JAS for guidance on style and formatting.

- Please submit all manuscripts and images to the Editor via the Editorial Manager website www.editorialmanager.com/jas/. Inquiries may be sent to jas@journalofasianstudies.org. Electronic text should use MS Word-compatible software; include a PDF file if using non-standard characters. Low-resolution images and illustrations are acceptable for the review process; all images, tables and figures should include titles or captions. Please note that in the event of publication, the author is responsible for acquiring high-resolution images along with permission to publish them. If electronic submission is not possible, please contact the editorial office at the email address, phone number or fax number listed above.
- Article manuscripts, including notes and references, should range between 8,000 and 10,000 words, or approximately thirty-five pages in length, and must include a 150 word abstract at the beginning of the document.
- Authors' names must be left off of the manuscript, as JAS engages in double-blind reviews.
- Manuscripts must be double-spaced with 12-point type and 1 inch margins including extracts, notes, and references, and formatted for letter-size (8.5 × 11 in.) paper if possible.
- Notes should be as few as possible and appear at the end of the text.
- Use parenthetical in-text citation, and author-date formatting for references per Chicago Manual of Style, 15th edition (Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 2003), pp. 616–24.
- Please use the following Romanization: Chinese: Pinyin; Japanese: Hepburn; Korean: McCune-Reischauer.
- If you are unable to upload your manuscript to the Editorial Manager website, please contact the JAS office.
- Manuscripts submitted to JAS should not have been published elsewhere and should not be under review for publication elsewhere.

Articles in JAS represent neither the views of the Association for Asian Studies nor those of the JAS editors. The Editor is responsible for the final selection of content of JAS and reserves the right to reject any material deemed inappropriate for publication. Responsibility for opinions expressed and the accuracy of facts published in articles and reviews rests solely with the individual authors.
