The Thomas Newcomen
$1,000 Award in Business History

Presented by

THE NEWCOMEN SOCIETY IN NORTH AMERICA

in cooperation with

THE BUSINESS HISTORY REVIEW

¶ The Newcomen Society in North America, in cooperation with the Business History Review, announces a prize of $1,000 and scroll to be awarded in 1967 for the best book on the history of business published in the United States during the years 1964-1966.

¶ For the purposes of this award, "the history of business" will be interpreted in its broadest sense, including not only the history of firms or industries, but books tracing interactions of businessmen, analyses of business philosophy or behavior, and studies of the adjustment of businesses and businessmen to their economic, political, and social environments.

¶ Criteria for selection will include contribution to knowledge, depth of analysis, soundness of reasoning, clarity of style and organization, and general readability and format.

¶ The committee to select the recipient of the 1967 Thomas Newcomen $1,000 Award in Business History is composed of: Professor James P. Baughman, Managing Editor, Business History Review, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration; Mr. Stanley van den Heuvel, Trustee, The Newcomen Society in North America; and Professor Arthur M. Johnson, Editor, Business History Review, Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, chairman.

¶ The 1967 Thomas Newcomen $1,000 Award in Business History will be the second in a triennial series of prizes intended to encourage the study and improve the writing of business history in the United States and Canada.

Isaac Hicks

New York Merchant and Quaker, 1767–1820

By ROBERT A. DAVISON

Making use of a large collection of letters, ledgers, and journals for the first time available, the author relates the story of a successful New York businessman and Quaker during the early National Period of American history. This book throws considerable light on the little-known marketing methods of the era, and the reciprocal relations of religion and business. Harvard Studies in Business History, 22. Illustrated. $4.75

Law and Economic Growth

The Legal History of the Lumber Industry in Wisconsin, 1836–1915

By JAMES WILLARD HURST

This work breaks new ground in providing an intensive case history of the interplay between legal process and economic development in 19th-century America. Through the story of the rise and decline of the Wisconsin lumber industry emerges a vivid picture of a society carelessly exploiting its natural resources in order to achieve increased productivity. This is a brilliant and successful experiment in the rudimentary field of the social history of law. A Belknap Press Book. Illustrated. $17.50

The Operating Engineers

The Economic History of a Trade Union

By GARTH L. MANGUM

In this first history of a major, but little known, union, the author traces the manner in which the structure and policies of a trade union have adjusted themselves to changes in the economic and technological environment within which it operates, and shows that failure to consider environmental factors has contributed to inadequacies in United States labor policy. Wertheim Publications in Industrial Relations. $7.50

Labor Relations in the Lithographic Industry

By FRED C. MUNSON

“. . . all of the problems of a living, vital segment of the visual and graphic communications field plus a postulation of possible future developments are to be found here. Highly recommended . . .”—Library Journal. “. . . not primarily a union history . . . [Munson] has clearly shown the impact of major economic and technological changes on a craft, union, and industry.”—Monthly Labor Review. Wertheim Publications in Industrial Relations. $6.50

State Regulation of Corporate Securities

One of the aims of the States has continually been to provide a favorable legal framework for the work of responsible entrepreneurs and corporations issuing stock and to protect them both against illegitimate competition. This paper illustrates this relationship of government and business through a general survey of State administrative practices in executing corporate securities legislation and a closer study of the single State of California.

GERALD D. NASH

Potential Competition and Antitrust

The concepts of actual and potential competition as natural checks on trusts are examined through the literature which accompanied the framing and passage of the Clayton and Federal Trade Commission acts. The contributions of professional economists to these discussions are especially significant in the evolution of the public policies ultimately adopted.

BENJAMIN J. KLEBANER

Cotton-Textile Institute and the Government

The process of mutual accommodation between government and business in the United States is well illustrated in this study of the strategy and tactics of a key twentieth-century business association.

LOUIS P. GALAMBOS

Arnold, Antitrust, and the New Deal

The pragmatism and experimentation permitted policymakers by the American antitrust statutes is well illustrated in this analysis of Thurman Arnold and federal attitudes toward business concentrations in the late 1930's.

GENE M. GRESSLEY

Business History in the National Archives

Many opportunities for fruitful research emerge from this survey of those holdings of the National Archives which are pertinent to the historical study of government-business relationships in the United States.
