

“Get your facts first, and then you can distort them as much as you please.”

– Mark Twain

Mark Twain: A Reference Guide is a verified, fully annotated chronological record of all the reviews, articles, and books on Mark Twain and his work published through 1973.

Here are excerpts from the first reviews of his works, comments like that of the early reviewer who found Tom Sawyer too violent for young children, and anecdotes like the one which claims Twain resigned from the San Francisco Call because it was strongly recommended he do so.

An author/title/subject index offers easy access to this fascinating material, much of it never before indexed.

“Extraordinary industry brings together a full and much needed bibliography of everything of any interest published about Mark Twain.” – Frederick Anderson, Editor, Mark Twain Papers.

The Sense of the Seventies

A Rhetorical Reader

Edited by PAUL J. DOLAN, State University of New York, Stony Brook, and EDWARD QUINN, City College, The City University of New York. This decade's sequel to the editors' popular reader on the sixties, The Sense of the Seventies captures the tones of our time registered by a wide range of commentators. Journalists, novelists and non-fiction writers, popular and academic critics, a politician, an activist playwright, a humorist, and a criminal are represented in the more than seventy selections. They all share a commitment to honesty of feeling and expression in their diverse approaches to some of the central experiences of our time. Pieces by Tom Wolfe, Gail Sheehy, Studs Terkel, William Buckley, Tom Wicker, Maxine Hong Kingston, and a host of others are arranged in thematic units: The Sense of the Seventies; The Power and the Press; The Search of the Seventies; People; Pop Culture; Male/Female; Scenes of the Seventies; Working; Race; Terror/Violence/Crime; The Limits of Life; and A Sense of the Future. As examples of powerful and successful writing, the selections are ideal as rhetorical teaching tools. To help serve classroom needs, there are pieces on many different reading levels and a Rhetorical Table of Contents is provided.

Decisive Writing

An Improvement Program

L. P. DRISKILL, Rice University, and MARGARET SIMPSON, San Jacinto College. The authors believe that most good writing results from a set of decisions made by the writer about his subject, his audience, his purposes, and the writing options he can command. Their aim here is to make student writers aware of the nature of decisions made in successful writing and to give them practice in evaluating the implicit choices they have made in their own writing. Decisive Writing may be used in a self-paced writing lab or a traditional classroom.

Writing and Reading as the Discovery of Outlook Second Edition

RICHARD M. EASTMAN, North Central College. "The second edition is as delightful as the first, and has the added attraction of the timely readings. . . . The playful and widely read imagination which chose the examples or invented the parodies and ironies is rich and original. The book, in its first edition, was ahead of its time in stressing writing as discovery (or exploration) and in this, its second edition, remains timely as ever."—Peter Neumeyer, West Virginia University

Elements of Literature

Essay, Fiction, Poetry, Drama, Film

Edited by ROBERT SCHOLLES, Brown University; CARL KLAUS, University of Iowa; and MICHAEL SILVERMAN, Brown University. Designed for the introductory literature course, Elements of Literature is distinctive among the many other anthologies in several ways. In addition to a rich sampling of fiction, poetry, and drama—from the classical period to the present—it offers a unit on the essay and one on the film as well. The editors provide a thorough analysis of several selections from each genre to serve as models for the student, and their lively introductions and remarks offer valuable critical perspective. Textual notes and glossaries within each unit are designed for easy student use. While Elements of Literature surveys the historical development of each genre, modern and contemporary writers are emphasized.

1978 1,416 pp.; 17 stills paper $10.00

A Teacher's Manual is available.

ESSAY 19 essays—from Addison and Swift to Orwell and Didion—help students make the transition from composition to the introductory literature course

FICTION Nearly 60 selections give broad historical and stylistic coverage
Fabulation, Realism, and Metafiction serve to organize the selections
Traditional writers are well represented—Chekhov, Lawrence, Welty, Flannery O'Connor, Hemingway, Faulkner, and many others
Contemporary writers include Vonnegut, LeGuin, Barth, Coover, and Olsen (Tell Me a Riddle)

POETRY At least five poems each by 30 major poets—From Shakespeare, Donne, and Keats, to Yeats, Eliot, and Thomas, to Gary Snyder, Adrienne Rich, and Michael Harper
Notes on poetic forms, language, and meter are provided

DRAMA 11 complete plays are offered, ranging from Lysistrata to The Misanthrope, from Arms and the Man to In the Wine Time
Detailed commentary on a tragedy, a comedy, and a naturalistic and an absurdist drama

FILM Thorough analysis of an important scene from Citizen Kane, enhanced by 17 stills
Concise coverage of basic camera techniques and movements

Great Film Directors

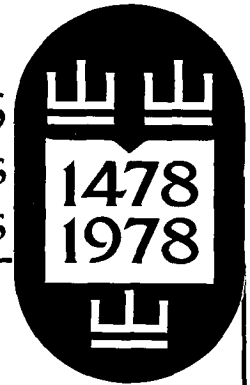

A Critical Anthology

Edited by LEO BRAUDY, The Johns Hopkins University, and MORRIS DICKSTEIN, Queens College, The City University of New York. Film Directors is an extraordinarily rich source-book on the careers and key films of twenty-three of the world's most important directors, from Griffith to the New Wave. It surveys the full range of critical perspectives in more than eighty selections, including the auteurist positions of Sarris on Antonioni and of Robin Wood on Hawks, and the anti-auteurist views of Sontag on Bergman and of Tyler on Ford. Some pieces cover entire careers or highlights—Michael Wood on Buñuel, Braudy on Renoir, Pechter on Ford—while others treat a representative film—John Russell Taylor on I vitelloni and La strada. A number of essays deal with particular directors in light of a specific aesthetic theory, for example, Christian Metz on "Mirror Construction in Fellini's 8½." Several reviews demonstrate the immediate response to the film experience. Of special interest are statements by directors on the work of other filmmakers—Buñuel on Lang, Ray on Renoir, Rivette on Hawks. The collection is enhanced by the editors' introduction on the role of the director and the significance of director-oriented film criticism.

TROLLOPE'S PALLISER NOVELS

Theme and Pattern

JULIET McMASTER, University of Alberta. Professor McMaster's selection of seven novels—The Small House at Allington and the Palliser novels—from the vast body of Trollope's fiction allows her to study the theme and structure of single novels in detail. Her close analysis reveals Trollope not only as the acknowledged master of subtle psychology, but as a thinking novelist who in each novel carefully integrates character and action, plot and subplot, incident and imagery, to elucidate his major theme.

MALORY: Works

Edited by EUGÈNE VINAVER. The text in this edition is based on the unique fifteenth-century manuscript found in 1934 in the Fellows Library of Winchester College. This manuscript, closer to what Malory actually wrote than Caxton's text, is also livelier than that version. The text in Malory: Works is presented in the original Middle English of the fifteenth century, in order that the spirit of this early masterpiece of English literature not be destroyed. Included in this edition are an introduction, a glossary, and fifty pages of explanatory notes on each of Malory's romances.

WILLIAM BLAKE'S WRITINGS

Vol. I—Engraved and Etched Writings

Vol. II—Writings in Conventional Typography and in Manuscript

Edited by G.E. BENTLEY, JR., University of Toronto. Blake's writings survive in a remarkable variety of forms: each form requires different editorial treatment. This edition is the first to be based upon an editor's personal examination of every known surviving copy of Blake's writings existing in collections from Edinburgh to Auckland. This first-hand information provides a wider basis for the text than has previously been possible and has permitted the incorporation of more extensive and precisely detailed notes on verbal and graphic details and variants. Included in this edition are reproductions of all the important printed designs Blake made for his own writings, with notes on all the illustrative designs. (Oxford English Texts)

One of the most significant and innovative series in American Literature studies today!

The American Critical Tradition Series

M. Thomas Inge
General Editor

This excellent series of volumes documents for the first time a lost chapter in the literary careers of America's most important writers: the critical reception accorded their work during their own lifetime by contemporary reviewers and critics. Perfect for background reading for those interested in any of these writers, ideal for course work, and unmatched as reference sources, these books will be indispensable as the most comprehensive collection of contemporary American criticism ever published.

Choice says: "Th[is] series is well worth having."

Two New Titles

Ernest Hemingway

THE CRITICAL RECEPTION

Edited, with an introduction, by Robert O. Stephens

This enormous volume of more than 550 pages chronicles the stormy love affair of the American public and critical establishment with a favorite author who somehow never seemed to deliver everything everyone wanted. All 24 of Hemingway's major books are covered here, from his earliest stories and poems, through the great novels, to the last works such as Across the River and Into the Trees and The Nick Adams Stories. Few American writers elicited such a volume of critical evaluation, and this collection's interest extends beyond Hemingway himself to its portrayal of many of the great American literary critics at work, among whom are Conrad Aiken, John Dos Passos, Max Eastman, Sinclair Lewis, Carl Van Doren, Edmund Wilson, Stephen Spender, and scores of others.

"Nowhere is Hemingway's impact on the literary world more tellingly revealed..."—Library Journal

Published Cloth, $22.50 Paper, 9.95

Robert Frost

THE CRITICAL RECEPTION

Edited, with an introduction, by Linda Wagner

Championed at the outset of his brilliant career by Ezra Pound, T.S. Eliot, Amy Lowell, and many others, Frost lived long enough to know harsh judgment and critical neglect. This book traces the rise and fall and rise again of the reputation of an American poet who had no peer. Critical evaluations by many of America's leading poets are contained in this study, among them writings by John Ciardi, Mark Van Doren, Stephen Vincent Benet, Louis Untermeyer, and Conrad Aiken.

Published Cloth, $21.50 Paper, 8.95

F. Scott Fitzgerald THE CRITICAL RECEPTION

Edited with an introduction, by Jackson Bryer

Essential for those who love Fitzgerald's work and for all students of twentieth-century American letters, this book chronicles the short but brilliant career of the writer who, in two decades, gave America and the world This Side of Paradise, The Beautiful and the Damned, The Great Gatsby, Tender is the Night, The Last Tycoon, and other collections of stories still read, enjoyed, and studied passionately. The critical material gathered here illuminates the divided critical reception accorded Fitzgerald's work: the acclaim for a genuinely new, honest author of great promise; the criticism of a verbose and sloppy writer as unstable as the characters he portrayed. Among the critics, besides Zelda Sayre Fitzgerald, whose work is represented include H.L. Mencken, Stephen Vincent Benet, James Thurber, Amy Loveman, Philip Rahv, Arnold Gingrich, Heywood Brown, Robert Benchley, and dozens of others.

THE CRITICAL RECEPTION

Edited, with an introduction, by John M. Reilly

This is the first serious study of the critical reception accorded the work of this exceptionally influential black author, whose works such as Black Boy and Native Son are read everywhere and have been continuously in print since their publication thirty years ago. The material gathered here illuminates, as nothing else could, the total identity of Wright's life and art and his preoccupation with the struggle for self-determination and victory over social and material forces. The volume includes writings by Granville Hicks, W.E.B. DuBois, Ralph Ellison, Lionel Trilling, Herbert Aptheker, Maxwell Geismar, Irving Howe, and scores of others.

Black American literature, although widely studied, has not received the careful scholarly scrutiny afforded "mainstream" American literature. This important new two-volume work will be both the most convenient and the most comprehensive source of bibliographical and critical information about black American writing, from its beginnings in the eighteenth century to its flowering in the work of major literary figures of the present.

The volumes not only identify but assess the available bibliographies, editions, manuscripts and letters, and biographical accounts of America's black writers, as well as the opinions of hundreds of critics.

Images of Society

John Colmer

This informative and challenging study argues that a radically different attitude towards society developed at the beginning of the nineteenth century. Colmer charts the critical images of society that imaginative writers have offered over the last two centuries, and analyzes the relationship between these images and literary form.

The Writings of Brendan Behan

Colbert Kearney

"...crisp, witty study of that boisterous man and gifted writer. . . . Kearney is a sympathetic, intelligent critic and he has written a compressed, incisive book. Understandably fascinated by Behan's personality, he makes no disproportionate claims for him as a writer but quietly reveals to us Behan's comic, compassionate uniqueness."

The American Moment

American Poetry in the Mid-Century

Geoffrey Thurley

Professor Thurley surveys the coming of age of American poetry in the crucial decade between the Korean and Vietnam Wars. He argues that a new maturity and a new personal awareness appears in the poetry of this period—in the Beat poets, Ginsberg and Corso, the academic

"prisoners of grace," Berryman, Lowell and Roethke, and the Black Mountain poets, Duncan and Oslo.

KTO PRESS is proud to make available an important new reference work in American letters

LITERARY WRITINGS
IN AMERICA:
A BIBLIOGRAPHY

Access has now been made available to the writings of all major and minor American writers (from 1850 through 1940) that appeared in over 600 journals and more than 600 volumes of literary history, criticism and bibliography. A carefully planned and thoroughly researched endeavor which resulted in the creation of a card file of 250,000 entries, LITERARY WRITINGS IN AMERICA was compiled during a 5-year period between 1938 and 1942 as a project of the Historical Records Survey program of the Federal WPA. By photo-offsetting the complete card collection, which has been housed since 1948 at the University of Pennsylvania, KTO Press brings together in eight volumes over 200,000 references to works by and about American authors.

Full names and dates of more than 600 authors are arranged in one alphabetical sequence. Writings by and about an author are classified under the person's name and categorized as to type of writing: bibliography, biography, fiction, essay, poetry, article, review, etc. Reviews are listed under the name of the reviewer; under the name of the author of the reviewed book; and, in the case of literary biography and criticism, under the name of the subject of the book.

Since indexing services for the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries are neither comprehensive in coverage nor consistent in quality, LITERARY WRITINGS IN AMERICA fills the void which had denied scholars complete bibliographic control. With the filling of this gap, scholars in the fields of American History and American Studies, as well as American Literature and Comparative Literature, will be greatly aided in their research.

EARTH

"... the story of EARTH, with its struggles and triumphs, is the story of literary America in the 30's."

— Joseph Niver

Part I of this 3-part volume is the story of the Earth Publishing Company as told by EARTH's editor and co-founder, Joseph Niver. His narrative stands as one of the finest accounts of a young and thoughtful generation during the social upheaval of a unique and trying period in America.

Part II of the volume is a full-size reproduction of the complete edition of EARTH which was published between 1930 and 1932. Contributors to this little magazine include Sterling North, James T. Farrell, Parker Tyler, and Norman Macleod.

The correspondence between French Nobel laureate Romain Rolland and Leo Tolstoy, originally scheduled for publication in the now defunct EARTH, forms the third part of the volume. The letters were translated by William T. Starr who has also written an essay on these writings specifically for this publication in which he places the letters in the context of Rolland's life and work. All of the material in Part III is published in its entirety in English for the very first time.

VICTORIAN COUNTRY PARSONS

By Brenda Colloms

The Victorian period sheltered and encouraged an immense flowering of talent among the country parsons: the budding naturalist, scientist, poet, artist, eccentric, and black sheep prospered and developed in the atmosphere of ordered calm and comparative leisure. 284 pages, illustrated. $11.95

EILHART VON OBERGE'S TRISTRANT

Translated with an introduction by J. W. Thomas

Composed some time between 1170 and 1190, Tristrant is the earliest complete account of Tristran and Isolde's tragic love story and, in the view of most scholars, is the version which most closely resembles the lost original. The translation renders the simple, often highly dramatic narrative verse of the original into an English prose which conveys a like spirit. viii, 155 pages. $9.50

THE SONG OF THE LARK (1915 Edition)

By Willa Cather

When The Song of the Lark appeared in 1915, no less a figure than H. L. Mencken proclaimed that "Miss Cather here steps definitely into the small class of American novelists who are seriously to be reckoned with." The Bison Book edition brings back into print for the first time since 1941 the original, uncut version of this classic story of the making of an artist. xii, 490 pages. Paper (BB 670) $4.95

RHYTHM IN THE NOVEL

By E. K. Brown

Since its publication in 1950, Rhythm in the Novel has been recognized as a classic of literary criticism. The essays are concerned with devices which unify the parts of the novel and give it resonance: elements of phrase, character, and incident; what the author calls "expanding symbols"; and interweaving themes. xvi, 118 pages. POOR MURDERER

A Play by Pavel Kohout

Translated by Herbert Berghof and Laurence Luckinbill

A triumph of the 1976-1977 Broadway season, Poor Murderer has been praised by Clive Barnes as "a strange, dazzling and intellectual play that zigzags across the stage and ricochets across the mind." The central character is a young Russian actor who goes mad playing the part of Hamlet, believing he has murdered the actor portraying Polonius, and has to be confined in a mental institution. It is one of those rare plays whose impact remains long after you have seen or read it. Illustrated.

KING ARTHUR'S BRITAIN

3 July - 11 August 1978

King Arthur's Britain offers, for the fourth year, an adventure through the literary and geographical terrains of Arthurian legend. Following the interwoven threads of romance and history, we shall encounter certain castles, hill forts, caves, stones, cathedrals, museums, and so forth, along with the traditions and narratives wherein endure Camelot, Merlin, the Round Table, Tristram & Isolde, the Isle of Avalon, Lancelot & Guenevere, the Battle of Badon, the Grail, and, among others, the Arthur-figure himself, whether dux bellorum or Once and Future King.

The full course lasts for 40 days, covering over 3,000 miles of England, Wales, & Scotland. Those not unfettered for the full time may join either of the 20-day halves: I. Southwestern England, or II. Wales, the North Country, & Scotland.

Credits: for the full course, four undergraduate, three graduate; for either half, two. Auditors are welcome to participate.

For details write Dr. S. E. Holbrook, King Arthur's Britain, English Department, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa. 19122 or call (215) 787-8516.

Inviting applications to the Concentration in Poetics in English Literature

M.A. and Ph.D.

The Concentration in Poetics in English Literature of the Graduate School of Arts and Science of New York University offers advanced studies in poetics for those who seek a deeper exploration of the theoretical and formal aspects of poetry. This program, offered at both the M.A. and Ph.D. levels, is designed for the graduate student who wishes to develop skills in critical empathy through immediate engagement with the dynamic process of individual poetic texts.

The curriculum is based on a critical approach that is intrinsic and qualitative yet open to the enlistment of all forms of scholarship, literary and interdisciplinary, and of criticism as well. It cuts across the chronological periods of literature in a coherent, developing sequence of interlinked courses and seminars. An important corollary objective is to encourage a sensitive involvement with poetry and other literature at all levels of teaching and criticism.

The Concentration in Poetics is under the direction of Professor M. L. Rosenthal.

The Scottish Novel

From Smollett to Spark

Francis Russell Hart

Francis Hart traces two centuries of Scottish fiction. Among the fifty novelists he discusses are Scott, Galt, George MacDonald, Stevenson, Gunn, and Jane Duncan in the light of their characteristic relationship to Scottish history and culture. He considers how the modern authors Muriel Spark, Eric Linklater, and Compton Mackenzie have at once rejected and assimilated Scottish tradition. Throughout, Hart weighs the distinctiveness of Scottish mode and motif and the impact of religion and folklore. $18.50

George Eliot and the Novel of Vocation

Alan Mintz

In the nineteenth century, Mr. Mintz maintains, work ceased to be merely what one did for a living or out of a sense of duty and became a vehicle for self-realization. He shows how George Eliot, in particular, linked the new social possibilities to the Puritan doctrine of calling or vocation, achieving a fictional structure that encompassed the conflicts of the age. Mintz also examines the idea of vocation as art in Victorian biographies and autobiographies. $11.00

Studies in Biography

Daniel Aaron, Editor

Biography and biographical criticism have taken new directions in recent years. Topics discussed here include the responsibilities of the biographer, biography as it intersects ethnography, biographies of historians by historians, the eulogy, and the biographical implications of a single piece of writing. The essays suggest why many scholars and writers are taking a biographical approach to human experience.

BEN·JONSON AND ELIZABETHAN COMEDY

Essays in Dramatic Rhetoric

by L. A. Beaurline

Ben Johnson said that he loathed the stage; however he continued to write for it. For more than thirty years he lectured, fooled, and delighted his audiences, experimenting with various modes of comedy, always stamping them with his own inventive genius. Jonson's comedy is compared here with that of Lyly and Shakespeare; a later chapter offers a brilliant study of Bartholomew Fair. Mr. Beaurline writes with enthusiasm and wit, and his book makes important reading for all students of Jonson and his times. Mar. 1978, app. 384 pp., illus. $14.50

A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare

AS YOU LIKE IT

Edited by
RICHARD KNOWLES

With a Survey of Criticism by
EVELYN JOSEPH MATTERN, IHM

The New Variorum Edition of As You Like It is the one book in which scholars can expect to find everything significant about this widely studied play. The volume presents the first edition of 1623 and traces it through forty-seven historically important editions completely and through thirty-six editions partially. Elaborate notes, which synthesize the works of some two thousand scholars and critics, provide literary and dramatic insights. A lengthy appendix discusses such subjects as the history of the text, the date of composition, the work's sources, its stage history, the music of the play (scores are included), the theme, the characters, and the literary style. Included is a complete version of Lodge's Rosalynde, the play's major source. Published 1 September 1977. 737 pages. Hardbound. $50.00.

Language and Materialism

Developments in Semiology and the Theory of the Subject

ROSALIND COWARD and JOHN ELLIS

The study of language as a system of signs has opened a new way to understanding mankind, social history and the laws of how a society functions. This book is a comprehensive and lucid guide through the labyrinths of semiology and structuralism, from Saussure's founding concepts in linguistics and the structuralism of Lévi-Strauss, through Barthes's Mythologies, and linguistic textual analysis.

Language and Situation

Language Varieties and their Social Contexts

MICHAEL GREGORY and SUSANNE CARROLL

An interdisciplinary approach to language variation as determined by the characteristics of the user and of use. Text varieties associated with situation types and culturally significant sets of language habits are also discussed. These varieties of use and usage are examined in relation to language functions and to such activities as language teaching, translation and the study of literature. Language and Society Series

Anthony Trollope

ARTHUR POLLARD

After many years when his reputation was in eclipse, Anthony Trollope is once again regaining his position as one of the most engrossing and widely read of Victorian novelists. In this introduction to Trollope's life and work, Professor Pollard surveys the whole of the author's output – the forty-seven novels and the various miscellaneous works – and puts forward a powerful case for a reassessment of his impressive achievement.

The Critical Twilight

Explorations in the Ideology of Anglo-American Literary Theory from Eliot to McLuhan

JOHN FEKETE

The main intellectual foundations of one of the dominant disciplines in North America and England – the forming of English studies – has received little attention from scholars. The first book to map extensively the ideological topography of the main Anglo-American pedagogic tradition of literary theory, this study also argues the ways in which criticism may be thought ideological. This is the first volume in a new series, The International Library of Phenomenology and Moral Sciences.

A Reading of 'Sir Gawain and the Green Knight'

J. A. BURROW

First published in 1965, this book has been out of print for some time, and is now being reissued for the first time in paperback. A. C. Spearing, in the Cambridge Review, described it as 'undoubtedly the best critique of the poem yet to have appeared. A learned, subtle, and distinguished piece of criticism . . . The lucidity and dry wit of its style will make it a pleasure to re-read. Burrow has put all readers of Medieval literature in his debt.'

Troilus and Criseyde

GEOFFREY CHAUCER

An Abridged Version Edited by D.S. and L.E. Brewer

The subject-matter of this great and relatively neglected poem – love-story, characterisation, comedy and tragedy, philosophical undertone – makes it a varied and rewarding literary experience. This edition, with introduction, detailed commentary and glossary, helps to make it accessible to the modern reader.

WALLACE STEVENS

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE POETRY

Susan B. Weston

A concise and readable exploration of Stevens's abiding themes and changing techniques, especially his lifelong meditation on reality and imagination. Ms. Weston's commentary will enrich the understanding of both newcomers and confirmed aficionados of this brilliant modern poet.

Columbia Introductions to Twentieth-Century American Poetry $10.95

FRANK O'CONNOR

AN INTRODUCTION

Maurice Wohlgeleinter

In this first extended treatment of O'Connor's literary career, Wohlgeleinter assesses the character and talents of this great Irish author, exploring the difficult circumstances of his native land that shaped his destiny as writer, as well as the major themes of his fiction. $13.50

STENDHAL AND THE AGE OF NAPOLEON

Gita May

Utilizing research that has appeared in the last twenty years, Gita May illuminates for the English-speaking reader the interplay between Stendhal's personality and his innovative, subtle art, pinpointing the ruling passions, intuitions, and enthusiasms that became the raw material for his literary creations. $14.95

JOHN BERRYMAN

AN INTRODUCTION OF THE POETRY

Joel Conarroe

The poetry of John Berryman is highly personal, reflecting the flamboyant, drama-filled life which ended with his suicide in 1972. This book takes a thoughtful look at every aspect of Berryman's accomplishments, clarifying the complex relationship between his ultimately liberating work and his private torments.

LETTERS TO W. B. YEATS

TWO VOLUMES

Richard J. Finneran, George Mills Harper, and William Murphy, Editors

The over 500 previously unpublished letters in this highly selective collection cast new light on Yeats's mind and art. Included are letters from famous and lesser-known writers and artists, and from colleagues in the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and the Society for Psychical Research. $37.50 the set

ESCAPE FROM THE SELF

A STUDY IN CONTEMPORARY POETRY AND POETICS

Karl Malkoff

Using two popular prophets of liberation from the self—Norman O. Brown and Marshall McLuhan—to provide cultural context, Malkoff explores the thesis that the characteristic common to most contemporary American poetry is its abandonment of the conscious, rational self as the inevitable perspective from which reality must be viewed. $12.50

MARXIST MODELS OF LITERARY REALISM

George Bisztray

In this first English-language work on the controversial concept of literary realism in the Marxist critical tradition, Bisztray presents an up-to-date, systematic review of existing work on the topic, including theoretical models of the views of such renowned critics and writers as Lukács, Gorky, Brecht, Plekhanov, Garaudy, and Fischer. $13.00

MILTON AND SEX

Edward Le Comte

In this original contribution to Milton literature, Edward Le Comte discusses the neglected and controversial topics of Milton's treatment of love, his sexual desire and orientation, and his attitudes on marriage and the physical relations between the sexes. An unusual and lively account for both general readers and Milton scholars. $12.50

DICKENS ON THE ROMANTIC SIDE OF FAMILIAR THINGS

BLEAK HOUSE AND THE NOVEL TRADITION

Robert Newsom

Exploring the multiple significances of Dickens' famous remark in the preface to Bleak House that in writing the novel he has "purposely dwelt upon the romantic side of familiar things," Newsom argues that the comment describes the central imaginative principle in this great novelist's art. $12.00

DICKENS AND REALITY

John Romano

In Dickens and Reality, John Romano considers the relation between the realistic and imaginative tendencies in Dickens, demonstrating that the current emphasis on the expressionistic and symbolistic aspects of his novels slights their persistent claim that they are set in the real world. $12.50

THE ART OF PERSUASION

A STUDY OF SIX NOVELS

Lars Hartveit

The strategies with which the novelist engenders and guides the reader's response is studied through an analysis of Richardson's Pamela I, Eliot's Silas Marner, Hardy's The Mayor of Casterbridge, Forster's A Passage to India, Greene's Brighton Rock, and Burgess's A Clockwork Orange.

Robert Greer Cohn

MODES OF ART

This original aesthetics from the author of L'Oeuvre de Mallarmé: un Coup de Dés presents the theoretical base of Cohn's critical and philosophical oeuvre.

Topics include polypolar epistemology and aesthetic matrices; number; rhythm; language; the image; (musical) tone; phonostylistics; laughter; symbolism; genre; poetic realism; impressionism; realism; creative temper; the critic's function; etc. Modes of Art is Volume I of Cohn's A Critical Work.

"Robert Cohn is known in France for epoch-making works . . . on Mallarmé. Modes of Art . . . gives the measure of his culture and penetration. The book is too rich for a review to do more than invite a reading of it . . . a fundamental thesis, properly philosophical, gives it a remarkable cohesion . . . he is above all an aristocrat of sensitivity . . ."

Joyce's Moraculous Sindbook

A Study of "Ulysses"

By Suzette A. Henke. Though most critics have been quick to acknowledge the innovative nature of James Joyce's stylistic experiments, few have pointed out the radical content of Ulysses or the revolutionary view of consciousness implicit in the novel. Professor Henke makes use of various Continental methods of literary criticism to reconstruct Ulysses as a fictional life-world, and draws upon phenomenology, Geneva criticism, psychoanalytic investigation, and linguistic analysis to illumine the progress of the narrative as the characters move from a world of solipsistic fear to one of shared experience, and from psychological enclosure to an existential liberation of consciousness.

Froude's Life of Carlyle

By James Anthony Froude. Edited and Abridged by John Clubbe. A judicious abridgment and edition of one of the two or three truly great biographies in the English language that restores to the literature a masterpiece hidden and neglected. By freeing Froude's text from the excesses in documentation belonging to the Victorian tradition of life and letters, Professor Clubbe makes it accessible to the modern reader, who will find, to his considerable profit and perhaps to his surprise, that few books have more to teach than Froude's Life of Thomas Carlyle.

The Oral Tradition of Classical Arabic Poetry

Its Character and Implications

By Michael J. Zwettler. Throughout centuries of Arabic literary scholarship, there has been little serious doubt that pre- and early Islamic Arabic poetry was produced and transmitted through the operation of some kind of oral tradition. What that fact really meant, however, and what the character and implications of such a tradition might have been, were questions that were seldom asked. Professor Zwettler asks them, and makes a considered attempt at answering them in terms of the "oral-formulaic" theory of poetic composition worked out by Milman Perry, Albert Lord, and others.

Happy Country, This America

The Travel Diary of Henry Arthur Bright

Edited, with a Biographical Essay, by Anne Henry Ehrenpreis. Though he once consigned himself to the relative obscurity of the several references made to him by Nathaniel Hawthorne in his English Notebooks, and never intended to publish the journal he kept of his travels in North America in 1852, Bright's account of his five-month journey was to evolve into a coherent narrative that, in its first publication, seems certain to win for him a more enduring place in literature than the modest fame he enjoys as Hawthorne's closest English friend. The impressions he recorded spontaneously in passing of, among others, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Montreal, and Boston, and of his encounters with such celebrated individuals as Charles Augustus Davis, W. W. Corcoran, Lord Elgin, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and Ralph Waldo Emerson, convey with remarkable immediacy how life in America must have looked to visitors from abroad, and afford us a rare opportunity to catch graphic glimpses of American social history in the very act of occurring.

Two Tales by Charlotte Brontë

“The Secret” & “Lily Hart”

Transcribed and Edited by William Holtz

“The Secret” and “Lily Hart,” published here for the first time, are among Charlotte Brontë’s juvenilia; they are naively conceived, yet the thousands of words she poured into her early writings led to the superb command of language she had as a mature author. Holtz successfully completed the task of transcribing the tales, which are part of an epic. They are written on notepaper folded into a miniature book measuring $3\frac{3}{8} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$ inches, with approximately 19,000 words contained in a sixteen-page folio. Holtz includes an exact transcription, a photographic enlargement of the manuscript, an edited transcription, and background material. 144 pages. \$28.00 Deluxe edition, \$65.00

The Old French and Chaucerian Fabliaux

A Study of Their Comic Climax

Thomas D. Cooke. Cooke offers a refined interpretation of the humor of the Old French fabliaux, discussing the various ways the authors of the fabliaux aim for the comic climax. Cooke compares Chaucer’s fabliaux to the French ones to show how the amusement depends upon the combination of a surprise ending and very careful preparation for that surprise. 224 pages, $15.00

Patterns and Coincidences

A Sequel to “All Is But a Beginning”

John G. Neihardt. In this continuation of his autobiography, Neihardt offers a final glimpse into his fascinating life. Covering the years 1901-1908 Neihardt shares a mingling of romantic anecdotes, telling of his early newspaper days, his family, and his relationships with Indians, relating each as it is recalled rather than cataloging the episodes in chronological order. 144 pages, $9.50

Mark Twain’s Mysterious Stranger A Study of the Manuscript Texts

Sholom J. Kahn. Working from the premise that the Paine-Duneka edition has led readers to reach erroneous conclusions about the quality of Mark Twain’s later writings, Kahn gives the true “Mysterious Stranger” texts a fresh reading, offering the first detailed criticism of works of central importance for an understanding of the entire Twain canon. 256 pages, $15.00

John Gould Fletcher and Imagism

Edmund S. de Chasca. De Chasca describes Fletcher’s role in the imagist movement, paying special attention to Fletcher’s relationship with Amy Lowell, and gives insight into the movement’s internal workings. Also provides a clear definition of imagism through a systematic exposition of what the original imagists, especially Pound, thought the word meant. 240 pages, $15.50

WHAT IS AN EDITOR?

Saxe Commins at Work

Dorothy Commins

Saxe Commins was the senior editor and, in the words of Bennett Cerf, "one of the great men of Random House," from 1933 until his death in 1958. In this work, Commins's widow, Dorothy, shows how her husband influenced the work of many important poets, playwrights, and novelists, especially O'Neill and Faulkner.

THE OYSTERS OF LOCMARIAQUER

Eleanor Clark

Winner of the 1964 National Book Award in Arts and Letters

This work is the story of those oysters of northern France known to be among the best in the world. It is a vivid, objective account of how these oysters are cultivated and at the same time an excursion into the mysteries of the zoological story, into the historical background, and into the myths and legends of Brittany.

THE ANGELIC AVENGERS

Isak Dinesen

"Dinesen creates the old world with its system of values, without the modern uncertainty between right and wrong. The fantastic plot is justified by a medieval allegory, the final triumph of good over evil." —Annamaria Micallef, The Spectator
