Theories of Dependent Foreign Policy

The Case of Ecuador in the 1980s
Jeanne A. K. Hey

How do economic weakness and dependence influence foreign policy decisions and behaviour in third world countries? Hey's study examines this complex and enduring question by reviewing current competing theories and undertaking some interesting case studies from Ecuador. The discussion borrows from a wide range of theoretical traditions including realism, dependency theory, and regional studies and applies them to foreign policy behaviour in Ecuador under the two separate regimes of Osvaldo Hurtado and León Febres Cordero. 280 pages, £21.00 paper

Theory and Practice in the Nicaraguan Revolution

Bruce E. Wright

Even in the period following the electoral defeat of the Sandanista National Liberation Front (FSLN) in 1990, the revolution of 1979 continues to have a profound effect on the political economy of Nicaragua. Wright's study, which is based on interviews with people from all walks of life as well as on the large volume of literature in both English and Spanish, focuses on the FSLN understanding of the relation between the state, the party, and mass actors and the nature of social classes. 320 pages, £22.00 paper

Magical Realism

Theory, History, Community
Lois Parkinson Zamora and Wendy B. Faris, editors

In this critical anthology, the first of its kind, the editors show magical realism to be an international movement—rather than an exclusively regional trend—with a wide-ranging history and a significant influence among the literatures of the world. In essays on texts by writers as diverse as Toni Morrison, Günter Grass, Salman Rushdie, Derek Walcott, Abe Kobo and many others, magical realism is examined as a worldwide phenomenon. 592pp, 11 illus., £21.95pb, £56.95hb

The Postmodernism Debate In Latin America

John Beverley, José Oviedo, and Michael Aronna, editors

This collection explores the Latin American engagement with postmodernism, less to present a regional variant of the concept than to situate it in a transnational framework. 336pp, £14.95pb, £45.50hb

Ethnicity, Markets, and Migration In the Andes

At the Crossroads of History and Anthropology
Brooke Larson, Olivia Harris, and Enrique Tandeter, editors

This volume overturns this widely held assumption that Andean peasants are isolated subsistence farmers "resistant" to money and different markets in the region, and puts in its place a new perspective as it explores the dynamic between Andean cultural, social, and economic practices and the market forces of a colonial and postcolonial mercantile economy. 432pp, £17.95pb, £55.00hb

West Indian Workers and the United Fruit Company in Costa Rica, 1870-1940

Aviva Chomsky

Aviva Chomsky provides a superb historical review of the development of the Costa Rican banana industry, the founding of the United Fruit Company, and its procurement of a Jamaican labour force. She closely examines the company's policies with regard to its workers—its work rules and working conditions, the treatment of labourers with respect to housing, medical care, and other matters—and its role within the larger framework of Costa Rican society and politics.

Latin American Underdevelopment

A History of Perspectives in the United States, 1870-1965

James William Park

With this penetrating study, James William Park provides the first comprehensive account of nearly a century of U.S. thinking on the reasons for Latin America's apparent "backwardness," from 1870, when the U.S. debated annexation of the Dominican Republic, through the 1960s, with the implementation of John F. Kennedy's doomed Alliance for Progress.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

The Journal of Latin American Studies is published three times a year, in February, May and October. Its editorial offices are located in the Institute of Latin American Studies, University of London. The editorial board includes representatives of the Centres or Institutes of Latin American Studies in the Universities of Cambridge, Essex, Glasgow, Liverpool, London and Oxford.

The scope of the Journal is the study of Latin America from the standpoint of the social sciences (including history and international relations). Articles on literature and the arts are not normally included, but the editors are pleased to consider contributions in the field of intellectual and cultural history. Articles with an inter-disciplinary approach are particularly welcome.

When an article has been accepted for publication, the author is strongly encouraged to send a copy of the final version on computer disk (Apple Macintosh or IBM compatible PC) together with the hard copy typescript, giving details of the wordprocessing software used (Microsoft Word or Word Perfect). However, the publisher reserves the right to typeset material by conventional means if an author's disk proves unsatisfactory.

Contributions are invited from all parts of the world. Articles should generally not be more than 8000 words long. The article should be accompanied by an abstract of not more than 100 words. Two copies typed with double spacing should be submitted. A style sheet is available from the editors. The Journal is published in English, but articles may also be submitted in Spanish or Portuguese; if the article is accepted, translation into English will be the responsibility of the author. Tables, diagrams and maps may be included by arrangement with the editors. The Journal only publishes original contributions; translations of articles already published will not be accepted. Each contributor will receive, free of charge, 25 offprints of the article and a copy of the issue of the Journal in which it appears.

The Journal publishes book reviews in each issue. Not all books received can be reviewed and editorial policy gives preference to substantial reviews of books regarded as of major importance for the disciplines covered by the Journal.

All contributions and editorial correspondence should be addressed to Journal of Latin American Studies, Institute of Latin American Studies, 31 Tavistock Square, London, WC1H 9HA.
