ENGLAND IN THE EIGHTEEN-EIGHTIES: Toward a Social Basis for Freedom

Helen Merrell Lynd

Introduction by Gerald M. Pomper

In this remarkable book the co-author of both Middletown and its sequel applied her analytical skills to a key decade in British history. From the inchoate source materials of a particularly complicated era, Lynd crafted and extended essay around a central theme that retains its value as a bold act of historical synthesis. . . . It is precisely because books such as England in the Eighteen-Eighties establishes persuasive arguments that thematic counterpoints ever emerge. Perhaps the best testimony of this book's importance might be that, forty years after its initial publication, its themes continue to occupy historians' agenda. Professor D. L. LeMahieu

YOUNG GERMANY: A History of the German Youth Movement

Walter Laqueur

If any age group has attained emancipation in the twentieth century, it is youth. Laqueur isolates the ability of youth to generate their own activities and organizations as an essential feature of the German youth movement. . . . Laqueur's study remains relevant to new research. He considers the number of youth leaders and youth social workers who had earlier taken part in the activities of the free youth movement. . . . One must recognize the potential of Young Germany for historians of social history and of social psychology. He shows how well the rebellious and vigorous youth groups shaped attitudes toward a range of national and personal issues. Professor Paul Weindling

COMING TO MY SENSES: The Autobiography of a Sociologist

George Caspar Homans

This book is graced by expository eloquence, frequent flashes of sharp wit, and literary expertise. It puts on display Homans's cultural and ideological conservatism, his strongly voiced opinions of views with which he disagrees and at times, what strikes me as unrestrained acerbity. . . . George Caspar Homans is a poet and student of literature. . . . As a sociologist he is also a man of science writ large. His autobiography is enhanced by sprightly observations in passing of subjects ranging from making martinis to religion, by candid citation of his tactlessness and impudence, and, as a fellow-chronicler I am pleased to note, by repeated reference to the role of luck in his career. Professor Charles H. Page

THE TRANSFORMATION OF DEMOCRACY

Vilfredo Pareto

Charles Powers, editor

What does the present book have to offer? It provides the current, almost day-by-day judgments of a great sociologist and economist on a brief but catastrophic period of European history. They are often judgments already expressed in Trattato, but they are always pungent and sometimes prescient. . . . The editor has provided a useful brief life of Pareto. . . . It is well worth reading for the insights, even amusing insights of a wise man commenting at the end of his life on the events of some of the crucial years of this century. Professor George C. Homans

A NEW SCIENCE JOURNAL
FROM CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

SCIENCE IN CONTEXT

New approaches in the history, philosophy and sociology of the sciences.

Science in Context subjects the sciences to the analytical tools of the historian, the philosopher, the sociologist, and the epistemologist. It brings together science and other disciplines and aims to show how resources and techniques developed in one discipline can be used in the study of science. The Board of Advisory Editors is drawn from many countries and from a wide range of disciplines and cultural traditions enabling Science in Context to translate and publish much previously inaccessible European material.

One issue per year will usually be devoted to a single topic. Volume 1, part 2 (Autumn 1987) will focus on 'Medieval and Renaissance Cosmology'.

Contents include:

Controversy: History vs. Philosophical History of Science

Simon Schaffer: Godly Men and Mechanical Philosophers

Zev Bechler: The Essence and Soul of Seventeenth Century Scientific Revolution

Controversy: The Emergence of Modern Science out of the Production Process

Franz Borkenau: The Sociology of the Mechanistic World-view

Henryk Grossmann: The Social Foundations of Mechanistic Philosophy and Manufacture

Valeria E Russo: Bio-Bibliography of Borkenau and Grossmann

Subscriptions for 1987:

£33.00 ($65) for institutions; £19.00 ($37) for individuals;

Comparative Studies in Society and History is a forum for presentation and discussion of new research into problems of change and stability that recur in human societies through time or in the contemporary world. It sets up a working alliance between specialists in all branches of the social sciences and humanities. Debate and review articles bring the general reader in touch with current findings and issues.

NOTES FOR CONTRIBUTORS

Contributions may be descriptive, analytical or theoretical. Any article not in itself comparative may be accepted if it lends itself to comment that will place it in comparative perspective. Correspondence with the editors prior to the submission of articles will help to enable them to obtain such comment or a companion study. Emphasis in comparative studies may be either on similarities or, if these are significant enough and call for some recasting of generalizations, on differences. All contributions and editorial correspondence should be sent to the Editors, Comparative Studies in Society and History, Department of History, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109.

Two copies of each contribution, preferably accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope, should be submitted. Both text and footnotes should be clearly typed with double spacing and wide margins; footnotes should appear on separate pages at the end of the article. Illustrations may be included by arrangement with the editors.
