Bibliography of EARLY NONCONFORMITY

Dr. Williams's Library

London

This is a catalog of all the books and pamphlets in Dr. Williams's Library, founded in 1729, concerned with Early Nonconformity in England from Elizabethan Puritanism to the end of the 18th century, and printed between 1566 and 1800, together with related works from Scotland, Ireland, Wales and New England. Virtually all of the historic literature of Protestant Dissent in Britain is covered, although the library's numerous works by European Reformers and Huguenot and Dutch theologians are not included. The bibliography is in three parts, which may be purchased separately: authors, specific alphabetical subjects, and chronology. There are various useful cross-references and identifications of many authors, editors, writers of prefaces, etc., hitherto anonymous. Prices to be announced

Dictionary Catalog of the

MISSIONARY RESEARCH LIBRARY

New York City

More than 100,000 cataloged items in this significant collection include works on the history and theory of missions; non-Christian religions and ideologies; the environment of the missions in the lands of the "younger churches"; and international affairs and world trends as they affect the Christian mission and its strategy. In addition to over 70,000 bound books, the collection comprises pamphlets, reports of missions and other institutions, and a large number of periodicals. Archival materials include the preparatory papers for the Edinburgh Conference of 1910; the reports on China of the Laymen's Foreign Mission Inquiry of 1930; and letters of John R. Mott, Robert Speer, and many others. The catalog contains author, title and subject cards; periodicals and reports will be listed separately in the latter part of the printed catalog.

Estimated 298,000 cards reproduced in 17 volumes

THE INDIVIDUAL AND SOCIETY IN THE MIDDLE AGES

Walter Ullmann

In most societies today the individual as a citizen has a common standing and an undoubted right to take part in government. In the Middle Ages the individual was merely subjected to superior authority. Yet during this time the rule of law was first formulated and applied. These lectures, delivered at Johns Hopkins University, explain why the concept of the citizen as we know it could not and did not emerge in the medieval period.

The Letters and Charters of Gilbert Foliot

Edited by DOM ADRIAN MOREY and C. N. L. BROOKE

Gilbert Foliot, a figure of great importance in the English church of the twelfth century, left a substantial collection of letters and charters which are valuable source material. This edition is the first reliable text and consists of a critical Latin text with footnotes; all known manuscripts are collated, the letters dated (often for the first time) and the circumstances of their composition discussed.

British Baptist Missionaries in India 1793-1837

The History of Serampore and Its Missions

E. DANIEL POTTS

William Carey, Joshua Marshman and William Ward, three remarkable men, developed at Serampore a new concept of missionary work which included medicine, agriculture, teaching and, above all, social reform.

Working from government, missionary and private sources, Dr Potts shows how the Baptists' early work not only established the future pattern for Christian missions, but also affected the character of Indian religion by stimulating the spirit of reform latent in Indian society, which contributed to the 'Indian Renaissance'.

Reason and Authority

The Thought of William Chillingworth

ROBERT R. ORR

The author uses unpublished manuscript material to illuminate Chillingworth's conversion first to the Roman Communion, then back to the Church of England. The book is both an intellectual biography and an essay in the history of ideas. 40s net

De Gestis Concilii Basiliensis Commentariorum Libri II

Aeneas Sylvius Piccolominus (Pius II)

Edited and translated by DENYS HAY and W. K. SMITH

This lively, first-hand narrative of the turning-point in the affairs of the Council of Basle was written by Aeneas Sylvius in 1440. Significant both as a historical source and as an example of a new approach to the writing of history, this is the first English version. Oxford Medieval Texts 55s net

DEATH & LIFE

IN THE TENTH CENTURY

BY ELEANOR DUCKETT

Dr. Eleanor Duckett depicts the tenth century as a time characterized by both violence and growth. She considers the cultural harvest of the Middle Ages . . . poetry, drama, painting, sculpture, architecture and manuscripts and the men who did their best to spread knowledge in an age of superstition and nescience.

Death and Life in the Tenth Century is written for the reader who is deeply interested in history. $8.75
