

the psychohistory review:

The Psychohistory Review's blend of history and psychology plays an increasingly important role in unfolding the past. Now in its nineteenth year of publication, the Review is an important periodical for psychologists, historians, psychoanalysts, sociologists, anthropologists and political scientists. When you finish your first issue you'll understand these comments:

"...the most important journal in the field of psychohistory; indispensable for both historians and clinicians..."

Bruce Mazlish
Massachusetts Institute of Technology

"In a field that is plagued with doubt and difficulty, The Psychohistory Review has set a consistently high standard of scholarship. More than any other single 'voice,' the Review talks in clear, sensible, and always interesting terms. It is, indeed, indispensable to further progress in psychohistorical studies."

John Demos
Department of History, Brandeis University

Psychohistory Review has been privileged to publish articles by respected thought-provoking writers. Recent articles include:

Thomas Fiddick, "The Repentant Revolutionary: Michael Bakunin and His Confession"

Ann Schofield, "To Do and To Be: Mary Dreier, Pauline Newman, and the Psychology of Feminist Activism"

Carol Z. Stearns and Peter N. Stearns, "Introducing the History of Emotion"

Charles B. Strozier, "Christian Fundamentalism, Nazism, and the Millennium"

Ronald R. Thomas, "The Narrative of Theory: The Novel in The Interpretation of Dreams"

The Psychohistory Review is a publication of Sangamon State University and the Group for the Use of Psychology in History, an affiliate organization of the American Historical Association.

Class Formation and Urban Industrial Society

Bradford, 1750-1850

Theodore Koditschek

A study of Bradford, a small market town of 4,000 inhabitants in 1750 which exploded into a major industrial city of 100,000 by 1850. The history of this town discloses with unusual force and clarity a process that was more gradually transforming the wider society of nineteenth-century Britain and subsequently spread throughout the world.

32771-7 Hardcover $69.50

Making Algeria French

Colonialism in Bône, 1870-1920

David Prochaska

A study, based on previously unavailable records, of French colonialism in Algeria, focusing on one particular colonial city, the city of Bône. Prochaska argues that, in making Bône a European city in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, the settlers effectively precluded any genuine rapprochement with the Algerians.
