
AFRICA

Vol. 67 No. 3 1997

Editor · Rédacteur

Murray Last

Reviews editor · Rédacteur comptes-rendus

Tom Young

Consultant editors · Rédacteurs consultatifs

Kwame Arhin · Bolanle Awe · Caroline Bledsoe · Angela Cheater
Caletous Juma · Paul Sinclair · Nicole Sindzingre · Ulrike Wanitzek

AUDIENCES IN ACTION

Guest Editor: Karin Barber

- Preliminary notes on audiences in Africa · Karin Barber 347
- 'This is actually a good interpretation of modern civilisation': popular theatre and the social imaginary in Ghana, 1946–66 · Catherine M. Cole 363
- Making up their own minds: readers' interpretations and the difference of view in Ghanaian popular narratives · Stephanie Newell 389
- Indian films and Nigerian lovers: media and the creation of parallel modernities · Brian Larkin 406
- Spirit media: the electronic media and Islam among the Dyula of northern Côte d'Ivoire · Robert Launay 441
- 'Music of origin': class, social category and the performers and audience of kiba, a South African migrant genre · Deborah James 454
- The political economy of video marketing in Ogbomoşo, Nigeria · Olatunde B. Lawuyi 476

Review article

- John Blacking and the study of African music · Kofi Agawu 491
-

Journal of the International African Institute
Revue de l'Institut Africain International

CONTRIBUTORS

KOFI AGAWU is Professor of Music at Yale University and Visiting Scholar at the University of Ghana. His books include Playing with Signs (1991) and African Rhythm (1995).

KARIN BARBER is Reader in African Cultural Anthropology at the Centre of West African Studies, University of Birmingham. Her most recent publication, co-authored with John Collins and Alain Ricard, is West African Popular Theatre (1997).

CATHERINE M. COLE is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Dramatic Art in the University of California, Santa Barbara. She is working on a book on the history of the Ghanaian concert party.

DEBORAH JAMES has now moved to the London School of Economics after lecturing for many years in social anthropology at the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg. She had done research in the Northern Province of South Africa and the urban centres of Gauteng on land, kinship and ethnicity, focusing particularly on migrants and their musical/dance performances.

BRIAN LARKIN is a member of the Program in Culture and Media in the Department of Anthropology, New York University, and is completing his doctoral dissertation, 'Islam and the Social Practice of Media in Northern Nigeria'.

ROBERT LAUNAY is Professor of Anthropology at Northwestern University. In 1982 he published Traders without Trade: responses to change in two Dyula communities and followed it up in 1992 with Beyond the Stream: Islam and society in a West African town. In addition he has contributed numerous articles on the Dyula of Côte d'Ivoire.

OLATUNDE B. LAWUYI is Professor of Anthropology at the University of Transkei, Umtata (South Africa), where he has been building up interest in anthropology and shaping a new curriculum. Since the 1980s he has published articles in Africa on aspects of western Nigerian popular culture.

STEPHANIE NEWELL lectures in English studies at the University of Stirling. She is researching West African popular literatures for her Ph.D. at the University of Birmingham. Her most recent publication is an edited collection of essays, Writing African Women: gender,