Cultural Capital

Mountain Zapotec Migrant Associations in Mexico City

Lane Ryo Hirabayashi — A PROFMEX Monograph

Focuses on three groups of Mountain Zapotec migrants to demonstrate uses of cooperation and mutual aid within a new environment, showing how paisanazgo is not merely the observance of tradition but rather a kind of cultural capital that is created as the Zapotec face the challenges of city life. Hirabayashi explains why migrant associations were created and then shows why they took different forms, citing regional variations in ethnicity, solidarity, occupational pursuits, and sociopolitical articulation. $35.00

In Search of a Home

Rental and Shared Housing in Latin America

Alan Gilbert

Draws on extensive surveys in Caracas, Mexico City, and Santiago to investigate the nature of owners, tenants, sharers, and landlords and exploring the relationships between them. Gilbert shows that there is a limit to universal home ownership, and that several governments have begun to express concern about the rental housing market, which has long been neglected at the policy level. $45.00

To Drink of Death

Narrative of a Shuar Warrior

Janet Wall Hendricks

Recorded narrative of an Ecuadoran headhunter, with discourse analysis, provides a valuable look at the Shuar—and their enemies, the neighboring Achuar—from the perspective of one of the last surviving warriors of a region long torn by intertribal conflict. Hendricks explores how a variety of linguistic and paralinguistic devices, as well as cultural and personal historical contexts, shape the narrative. $35.00

Keepers of the Sacred Chants

The Poetics of Ritual Power in an Amazonian Society

Jonathan Hill

The Wakuenai of the upper Rio Negro region in southern Venezuela employ a form of singing called malikai for ceremonies of childbirth, initiation, and healing. Hill now interprets malikai through mythic narratives and shows how semantic and musical meanings are joined to construct each chant and how these chants are manipulated in different contexts. $35.00

Guerrillas and Revolution in Latin America

A Comparative Study of Insurgents and Regimes since 1956

Timothy P. Wickham-Crowley

In this comparative survey of guerrilla movements in Latin America, Timothy Wickham-Crowley explores the origins and outcomes of rural insurgencies in nearly a dozen cases since 1956. Focusing on the personal backgrounds of the guerrillas themselves and on national social conditions, the author explains why guerrillas emerged strongly in certain countries but not others.

“[This book] represents the first real attempt to bring together Latin American case studies and sociological theories of revolution. It provides a useful framework for students seeking to compare the Latin American guerrilla experiences.”

STATISTICAL INDICATORS ON DEVELOPMENT AT YOUR FINGER TIPS

Statistical Yearbook for Latin America and the Caribbean, 1992

This publication presents accurate data on 33 Latin American countries in two parts. Part one consists of derived socioeconomic indicators which provide an overview of each area of interest along with the background material needed to make the information suitable for use in specialized analyses. The areas covered are: social development and welfare; economic growth; domestic prices; external trade and external financing. Part two provides historical series in absolute figures which can be used for a large variety of purposes. The presentation of the data facilitates comparisons among countries as well as between individual countries and regional totals. The areas of coverage include: population, national accounts, domestic prices, external trade, employment and infrastructure services.

The Least Developed Countries, 1992 Report

“The drive towards economic reform in Least Developed Countries (LDCs) has continued to gather momentum in some countries, but is faltering in many others.”

This year's Report assesses the recent economic performance of the LDCs against the background of the current slowdown of the world economy, analyzes demographic trends and policies in these countries and examines issues relating to food security. It reviews progress in the implementation of measures of support for the efforts of the LDCs, particularly in respect of the flow of resources to them and their debt and debt service burden. In addition, the Report takes up the issues of domestic resource mobilization in LDCs and the impact of the Uruguay Round on trading opportunities for these countries. The statistical annex to the report presents basic data on the LDCs.

The Rise of the Professions in Twentieth-Century Mexico
David E. Lorey

What has been the pace of historical social mobility from the inside, from the perspective of people trying to make their way into the Mexican middle class? How has the market for university graduates in Mexico developed over time? What do patterns in the evolution of that market indicate about Mexican economic development? The data developed in this study suggest answers to these and other questions about higher education, social mobility, economic development, and political conflict in twentieth-century Mexico.

Environmental Hazards and Bioresource Management in the United States-Mexico Borderlands

Edited, with Introductions, by Paul Ganster and Hartmut Walter

Thirty-seven essays by scientists, social scientists, public officials, and policymakers from the United States and Mexico discuss the environmental issues that have accompanied growth and development along the U.S.-Mexican border. The authors also consider policy alternatives to counter negative environmental impacts and to manage the region's resources for the future.
