"This is by far the best book on the French Government that has appeared, either in French or in English, for a long time. . . Procedural details do not naturally lend themselves to interesting treatment. But Mr. Lidderdale has so completely mastered them, and describes them with such limp clarity and with so profound an understanding of their historical roots, that he has succeeded in writing a fascinating book about them. . . . The book has an immediate interest and a topical value. . . . The student of French history is as much indebted to the author as is the student of French government today."
—Spectator

"It is rare for a standard work on the detailed organization of political institutions in one country to be written by a citizen and in the language of another. Yet Mr. Lidderdale looks like achieving this distinction. Under the aegis of the Hansard Society he has made a valuable contribution towards an understanding of French parliamentary procedure, and with it of the politics of France."
—Economist

"The Hansard Society is to be congratulated on the publication of Mr. Lidderdale's valuable outline of the management of the French Parliament. . . . Mr. Lidderdale is to be thanked for this lucid and penetrating contribution to the study of politics."
—Listener

"Mr. Lidderdale. . . has admirably executed his project. . . full of fascinating points and will instruct, as well as enlighten, even the best-informed student of French affairs."
—The Times Literary Supplement

"Here is the type of book which, seemingly written for the specialist, should in fact be in the hands of every intelligent man and woman. The author has covered the ground very thoroughly."
—Fortnightly

". . . extremely valuable. Its authenticity is guaranteed by a Foreword from M. Herriot; and it has the merit of extreme clarity."
—Daily Telegraph

". . . admirably conceived. . ."
—The Times Educational Supplement

"A most useful, well-annotated survey. . ."
—Twentieth Century

". . . a comprehensive study. . . has lasting qualities. . ."
—Scotsman
