Southern Rhodesia: the effects of a conquest society on education, culture and information
Marion O'Callaghan

A devastating account, well supported with figures, of how 250,000 whites have assured their continuing domination over the 6,000,000 black who inhabit Southern Rhodesia, or Zimbabwe. Drawing heavily on the Smith regime's own data, the author argues that "the entire barrage of laws enforcing segregation aims not at separate or parallel development, but at maintenance of a conquest State in which a coalition of classes within the white group effectively exploits all sectors of a conquered African population."

Mucheke: race, status and politics in a Rhodesian community
A.K.H. Weinrich

A detailed and fascinating study of the life and attitudes of Africans living in the Mucheke township of Southern Rhodesia, and their interaction with European residents in adjacent Fort Victoria. The author, a social anthropologist, was a professor at the University of Rhodesia before she went into exile. Her research is based on first-hand observation of the physical, moral and psychological effects of racial exploitation. Illustrated.

METHUEN

NORMAN BENNETT

Studies in African History

During the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries the fertile islands of Zanzibar and Pemba developed into important points in East Africa for commercial, diplomatic and economic relationships with Asia, Europe and North America.

This book traces the development of these islands from the early days of the Arab sultans, through the period of the British protectorate, to independence in 1963 and the formation of Tanzania under African rule in 1964.

Professor Bennett has written the first single-volume history of the Arab state of Zanzibar. His study provides unbiased new interpretations of the roles of Zanzibar's rulers from 1856 to the early twentieth century and it evaluates British colonial policy in an effort to explain the particular nature of the revolt in 1964 which ended the Arab state.

Mind in the Heart of Darkness

Value and Self-Identity among the Tswana of Southern Africa

Hoyt Alverson

Living both in South Africa and in Botswana, the people studied here have experienced different degrees and kinds of exposure to colonialism.

This pathbreaking contribution to the literature on colonized peoples uses the language forms and oral literature of the Tswana themselves as data in determining how their complex relationship with colonial political economy affects personality, concept of self, and world-view.

Quaker Experiences in International Conciliation

C. H. Mike Yarrow

Foreword by Anatol Rapaport

As far back as the early 1900s, the Quakers have been engaged in a program of quiet private diplomacy that won them a Nobel peace prize in 1947. During the turbulent 1960s, they acted as unofficial conciliators in several tense situations. This comprehensive study of Quaker peace-making activities focuses primarily on the variety and effectiveness of their efforts in Berlin from 1960 to 1973, in India/Pakistan in 1965, and in Nigeria from 1967 to 1970. $10.00

Economic Development and Urban Migration

Tanzania 1900–1971

R. H. Sabot

In this study Dr. Sabot demonstrates how the rapid rise of urban wages between 1956 and 1970, while rural incomes remained stagnant, resulted in a shift from wage labour scarcity during the colonial period to surplus labour since Independence. The causes of this segmentation are traced to changes in the economic and political structure in the period since the Second World War. £12.50

Trade without Rulers

Pre-Colonial Economic Development
in South-Eastern Nigeria

David Northrup

Pre-colonial south-eastern Nigeria had a dense population and vigorous internal and external trade, but lacked large-scale political units. As the author shows, complex marketing networks enabled this 'stateless' region to function as an economic unit long before the arrival of the first Europeans. He examines the operation and effect of the overseas slave trade in the region, in terms of its previous economic development. £9 Oxford Studies in African Affairs

Rural Rebels

A Study of Two Protest Movements in Kenya

Audrey Wipper

Rural Rebels is a study of two protest movements – the cult of Mumbo and Dini ya Mswamba – that originated respectively in the early and late periods of Kenya's colonial history. It covers many aspects of social movements: the social-structural conditions that produced them; the courses of discontent; the movements' beliefs, symbols, and activities; the stages of development; and the major determinants. £7.25

THE JOURNAL OF MODERN AFRICAN STUDIES

The Journal offers a quarterly survey of politics, economics, and related topics in contemporary Africa.

The main emphasis is upon the peoples and policies, the problems and progress of this dynamic and disparate continent; upon the many societies that are evolving rather than the essential characteristics of the old; upon the present, not on the more distant past. The best current work is sought from specialists in different academic disciplines, whose contributions can illuminate and cross-fertilise one another.

The Journal seeks to promote a deeper understanding of what is happening in Africa today. It is intended for both the political scientist and the practical politician, the administrator and the advocate, the economist and the educator, the banker and the business man, the diplomat and the technocrat, the civil servant and the nationalist leader. All have something to contribute to these pages and it is hoped, much to learn from them.

Editorial policy avoids commitment to any political viewpoint or ideology, whether imperialism, pan-Africanism, capitalism, socialism, or nationalism. Such concepts, however, have relevance to the modern African situation, and merit serious discussion, often from several different points of view, in order that controversial issues may be fairly examined.
