

People in Political Science

at Brigham Young University for the 1989-90 academic year.

George Romoser, University of New Hampshire, was a visiting professor at Kobe University, Japan, 1988-89. He is a visiting professor of government and legal studies, Bowdoin College, spring semester 1990.

David W. Sturrock, visiting instructor of political science, Wittenberg University.

Award Recipients

American Bar Association

The American Bar Association has announced the institutions that received mini-grants for 1989-90 from its Commission on College and University Nonprofessional Legal Studies. The following are political science awardees.

Jamestown Community College, Jamestown, New York. $1,200 for "Comparative Legal Studies: Canada, the United States, and Individual Rights." Project Director: Gregory Rabb, Political Science.

Native American Educational Services College, Chicago, Illinois. $1,000 for "American Indian Religious Freedom and the Law." Project Director: Anne Straus, Community Studies.

Purdue University (Public Affairs Video Archives), Lafayette, Indiana. $900 for "Understanding the Legal Process through the Words of Supreme Court Justices." Project Director: Robert Browning, Political Science.

Applications for the 1990-91 program are available from: John Paul Ryan, Staff Director, American Bar Association, Commission on College and University Nonprofessional Legal Studies, 750 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, IL 60611. Phone: (312) 988-5725. The deadline is March 1990.

1989-90 American Fulbright Scholars

Each year about 1,000 Americans are awarded Fulbright grants to lecture or conduct research abroad. About 60% of the awards are for university lecturing, and many include opportunities for research.

The following scholars were chosen in the fields of political science and public administration. Each entry includes name of the grantee, academic rank, home institution, grant activity, host institution and country, and grant duration. There is also a listing of political scientists in special programs.

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Robert B. Albritton, associate professor, department of political science, Northern Illinois University. Lecturing and research on social science research methods. Prince of Songkla University, Pattani, Thailand. Five months, July 1989-January 1990.

Bruce Michael Bagley, associate professor, graduate school of international studies, University of Miami. Lecturing on Andean comparative politics. Latin American Faculty of the Social Sciences, Quito, Ecuador. Two months, June-August 1989.

W. Lance Bennett, professor, department of political science, University of Washington. Research on comparative political cultures and rhetorical structures: United States and Sweden. Swedish Institute of North American Studies, University of Uppsala, Uppsala, Sweden. Four months, between September 1989-June 1990.

Paul Joseph Best, professor, department of political science, Southern Connecticut State University. Research on the Lemko-Rusyns in the 20th century. Jagiellonian University of Krakow, Krakow, Poland. Two months, between September-November 1989.

James W. Bjorkman, associate professor, department of preventive medicine, University of Wisconsin-Madison. Lecturing in political science and public administration. American Studies Research Center, Hyderabad, India. Twelve months, September 1989-September 1990.

Jan Knippers Black, research professor, division of public administration, University of New Mexico. Lecturing on democracy, populism, and ways of participation. University of Cuyo, Mendoza, Argentina. One week, November 1989.

Henry Frank Carey, doctoral candidate, department of political science, Columbia University. Lecturing in political science. Central American University, Managua, Nicaragua. Twelve months, July 1989-July 1990.

Pamela Constable, foreign correspondent, foreign news department, Boston Globe Newspaper. Research on Pinochet's Chile: Dictatorship in a democracy. Santiago, Chile. Six months, March-September 1989 (American Republics Research Program).

Edward M. Dew, professor, department of political science, Fairfield University. Research on revolution and restoration in Suriname. University of Suriname, Paramaribo, Suriname. Six months, April-October 1990 (American Republics Research Program).

Stephen E. Frantzich, professor, department of political science, U.S. Naval Academy. Lecturing on comparative parliamentary applications of information technology. University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen, Denmark. Four months, July-December 1989.

William L. Furlong, professor, department of political science, Utah State University. Lecturing on U.S.-Latin American politics. University of Costa Rica, San Jose, Costa Rica. Four months, March-July 1989.

Arthur Benjamin Gunlicks, professor, department of political science, University of Richmond. Research on the Lander in the German federal system. Research Institute, Speyer, Federal Republic of Germany. Three months, February-April 1990.

Fred R. Harris, professor, department of political science, University of New Mexico. Lecturing on democracy and modern parliament. Fulbright Commission, Montevideo, Uruguay. One week, June 1989.

Alex Roberto Hybel, assistant professor, department of international relations, University of Southern California. Lecturing on political theories of international politics. University of Republic, Montevideo, Uruguay. One month, June-August 1989.

Philip L. Kelly, associate professor, department of political science, Emporia State University. Lecturing and research on developing future leadership in Paraguay. Affiliation to be determined, Asuncion, Paraguay. Nine months, August 1989-May 1990.

Hong N. Kim, professor, Department of political science, West Virginia University. Lecturing and research in political science. Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea. Ten months, February-December 1990.

Robbin F. Laird, adjunct professor, department of political science, Johns Hopkins University-SAIS. Lecturing in Soviet studies and Soviet foreign policy. Four months, April-July 1990.

Donald S. MacDonald, research professor, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University. Lecturing and research on Korean political development, 1945-1985. Korea University, Seoul, Korea. Ten months, February-December 1990.

Vojtech Mastny, professor, center for international relations, Boston University. Lecturing and research on political implications of Soviet troop withdrawals from Europe. University of Bonn, Bonn, Federal Republic of Germany. Ten months, September 1989-July 1990.

John David Nagle, professor, department of political science, Syracuse University. Lecturing on problems of comparative political system development. University of Marburg, Marburg, Federal Republic of Germany. Three months, May-July 1990.

Anne Norton, assistant professor, department of politics, Princeton University. Research on the state of Alwar: Colonization and the language of rule. National Archives, New Delhi, India. Two months, dates to be determined (Indo-American Fellowship Program).

Augustus R. Norton, associate professor, department of social sciences, U.S. Military Academy. Research on peace keeping in conditions of internal war. Norwegian Institute of International Affairs, Oslo, Norway. Four months, September-December 1989.

Robert C. Oberst, associate professor, department of political science, Nebraska Wesleyan University. Lecturing in political science. University of Peradeniya, Kandy, and University of Colombo, Colombo, Sri Lanka. Seven months, January-August 1990.

Brainard Guy Peters, professor, department of political science, University of Pittsburgh. Lecturing on comparative public administration and public policy reorganization of government in an era of retrenchment. University of St. Gallen, St. Gallen, Switzerland. Four months, April-August 1990.

Frances Fox Piven, professor, department of political science, CUNY Graduate School and University Center. Lecturing on American politics and institutions: Bologna Chair in Political Science. University of Bologna, Bologna, Italy. Three months, between September 1989-June 1990.

Jean C. Robinson, associate professor, department of political science and women's studies, Indiana University. Lecturing on American social movements: Theories and practice. University of Warsaw, Warsaw, Poland. Ten months, September 1989-July 1990.

Herman M. Schwartz, assistant professor, department of government and foreign affairs, University of Virginia. Lecturing on comparative patterns of foreign debt-financed economic development in Australasia and Denmark. University of Aarhus, Aarhus, Denmark. Four months, January-May 1990.

Wayne Alan Selcher, professor, department of political science, Elizabethtown College. Lecturing on U.S. foreign policy in world context. Latin American Faculty of the Social Sciences, Buenos Aires, Argentina. One month, June-July 1989.

William C. Smith, assistant professor, department of politics, University of Miami. Research on the political economy of democratic transition in Argentina and Brazil. University Research Institute of Rio de Janeiro, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Center for the Study of State and Society, Buenos Aires, Argentina. Six months, July-December 1989 (American Republics Research Program).

William E. Steslicke, associate professor, department of policy and management, University of South Florida. Research on national health insurance: The Japanese experience. University of Tokyo, Tokyo, Japan. Nine months, September 1989-May 1990.

Dae-Sook Suh, professor, department of political science, University of Hawaii. Research on new political elites of North Korea. Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea. Six months, March-August 1989.

Charles D. Tarlton, associate professor, department of political science, SUNY-Albany. Lecturing in an integrated pilot program in American studies. University of Malta, Valletta, Malta. Nine months, September 1989-June 1990.

Mary Ann R. Tetreault, associate professor, department of political science, Old Dominion University. Research on Kuwait's oil companies: Pioneering organizations in a new world order. Kuwait University, Safat, Kuwait. Five months, January-June 1990.

Willard S. Thompson, associate professor, Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University. Research on security and development in the Philippines. Philippine Institute for Development Studies of the National Economic and Development Authority, Manila, Philippines. Four months, September 1989-January 1990.

Arturo A. Valenzuela, professor and director, department of Latin American studies, Georgetown University. Research on political parties under authoritarianism: Theoretical reflections on the Chilean case. Catholic University of Chile, Santiago, Chile. Six months, June-August 1989 (American Republics Research Program).

Franz A. Von Sauer, associate professor, department of political science, Oklahoma State University. Lecturing and research in political science. Central University, Caracas, Venezuela. Eleven months, September 1989-August 1990.

People in Political Science

Marvin G. Weinbaum, professor, department of political science, University of Illinois-Urbana-Champaign. Research on the political economy of Afghan resettlement and reconstruction (Afghan Refugee Program). University of Peshawar, Peshawar, Pakistan. Five months, January-June 1990.

Gregory B. Wolfe, professor, department of international relations, Florida International University. Lecturing on education administration. Visits to various institutions, Quito Ecuador. Two months, May-July 1989.

Daniel Gates Zirker, assistant professor, department of political science, University of Idaho. Lecturing on social science methods: The political economy of underdeveloped countries. University of Dar es Salaam, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania. Ten months, August 1989-June 1990.

PUBLIC ADMINISTRATION

Steven E. Aufrecht, associate professor, school of public affairs, University of Alaska. Lecturing on public administration and personnel management. Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong, Hong Kong. Ten months, August 1989-June 1990.

Philip Bereano, professor, engineering interdepartmental curricular programs, University of Washington. Lecturing on curriculum development in science, technology, and society. Institut d'Urbanisme and University of Paris XII, Paris; Institut de Recherche et d'Enseignement Supérieur aux Techniques de l'Électronique, University of Nantes, Nantes, France. Four Months, September 1989-January 1990.

Bryan Trevor Downes, professor, department of planning, public policy, and management, University of Oregon. Lecturing on managing scarce fiscal resources: The case of rural local governments in New Zealand. University of Auckland, Auckland, New Zealand. Six months, January-June 1990.

Steven Flanders, circuit executive, U.S. Courts for the Second Circuit. Lecturing on judicial training in Uruguay. University of the Republic, Montevideo, Uruguay. One month, April-May 1989.

H. George Frederickson, professor, department of public administration, University of Kansas. Lecturing on issues of bureaucracy and democracy in an era of political change (Distinguished Lecturer). Dongguk University and Seoul National University, Seoul, Korea. Three months, April-July 1990.

Donna R. Kemp, professor, department of political science, California State University-Chico. Research on community health services. Mental Health Foundation, Auckland, New Zealand. Six months, June-November 1989.

Susan Ann MacManus, professor, department of public administration and political science, University of South Florida. Research on public sector stimulants to local economic growth and development in Korea. Yonsei University, Seoul, Korea. Six months, July-December 1989.

Alfred Marcus, associate professor, Carlson School of Management, University of Minnesota-St. Louis Park. Research in public administration. University of Lyon III, Lyon, France. Three months, March-June 1989.

John A. Rohr, professor, center for public administration and policy, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. Research on ethical issues for career civil servants in France and in the United States: A comparative study. Institut d'Études Politiques, Paris, France. Seven months, January-August 1990.

SEMINAR ON GERMAN CIVILIZATION AND SOCIETY (LANDESKUNDE), June-July 1989

Jeffrey J. Anderson, assistant professor, department of political science, Emory University.

John W. Fenske, assistant professor, department of political science, Williams College.

Manfred Landecker, associate professor, department of political science, Southern Illinois University.

NATO ADVANCED RESEARCH FELLOWSHIPS

Earl Wallace Walker, professor, department of public policy studies, U.S. Military Academy. Research on reserve forces in NATO: A study in comparative civil-military relations.

U.S.-JAPAN INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION ADMINISTRATORS PROGRAM, June-July 1989

Joseph L. Overton, chairman, department of political science and international studies, Morgan State University.

Fund for Research on Dispute Resolution

The following political scientists received research grants from the Fund for Research on Dispute Resolution.

Herbert Jacob, Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research, Northwestern University—a $65,092 grant to examine the effects of “bargaining in the shadow of the law” in the context of divorce negotiations.

Neal Milner, program on conflict resolution, University of Hawaii—a $36,616 grant to develop a book with other scholars and practitioners that focuses on perspectives of popular justice and community-based mediation.

Neghin Modavi, department of political science, University of Hawaii—a $15,000 grant to develop case studies of environmental land use disputes in Hawaii examining the nature and impact of state intervention.

James Perry, school of public and environmental affairs, Indiana University—a $42,988 grant to study what happens when employees “blow the whistle” on their employers’ illegal or illegitimate practices by initiating a complaint.

Other Awards and Honors

Melvin A. Kahn, professor of political science at Wichita State University, has been selected by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education as the Kansas Professor of the Year for 1989.

L. Sandy Maisel, professor of government at Colby College, has been named Professor of the Year by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) for the State of Maine.

Steven M. Maser

Steven M. Maser, Willamette University, has received the Burlington Northern Foundation Faculty Achievement Award for 1989 in recognition of outstanding academic and professional achievements.

Eugene B. Skolnikoff, professor of political science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, received the Order of the Rising Sun, Gold Rays, Neck Ribbon for "his many contributions to the promotion of friendship and mutual understanding between Japan and the United States." The award particularly recognizes his work on energy-related issues.

D. Grier Stephenson, Jr., Franklin & Marshall College, was named as Charles A. Dana Professor of Government.

In Memoriam

J. Thomas Askew

The day after Iranian students took American embassy personnel hostage in Tehran, in 1979, I wandered over to Thomas Askew's office down the hall from mine. Retired, Tom had been named a professor emeritus of political science and continued to come in to the department every day. I knew he would have some interesting observations on the likely repercussions of the crisis for the Carter administration.

His door was wide open but his ruddy face, always assured to light up the room with a twinkling smile at the arrival of a visitor, was nowhere in sight. Around the perimeter of his desk stood a high wall of books. As I approached this literary fortress, a hand appeared at the top of the wall and removed a book. I peered around to see several more books laying open on Tom's desk and another stack resting next to his knee. I cleared my throat and Tom looked up from his reading, a 1,000-watt grin brightening the room and Sam Ervin-eyebrows beginning to dance.

I kidded him that a professor emeritus was supposed to take it easy, not check out half the books in the library.

"I'm going to read everything we have on Iran," he replied, then launched into an informative review of what he had learned so far about Iran's history and the immediate wellsprings of the fundamentalist revolution underway.

Here was vintage Joseph Thomas Askew, born in Carrollton, Georgia, on March 15, 1903, and, therefore, seventy-six at the time of the Iranian crisis. Many a mortal would have been content at that age with a round of golf and some gardening. Tom enjoyed both putting and put-tering (we rarely broke 100 on the fairways but, at one time, he had one of the best azalea gardens in the county). Above all, though, he was to his last days fascinated by politics—and fascinating in his political recollections and commentary. He could converse at length on his early remembrances of the fiery Georgia populist Tom Watson, or offer a trenchant discourse on the latest mistakes of the national Democratic party (for which he kept hoping for better days). And he was always interested in the views of his younger colleagues and questioned them about current events whenever they were free. Tom was a southern gentleman, an insightful scholar, a political moderate (Senator Ernest Hollings of South Carolina particularly caught his eye), and, despite his age, a lively, well-informed colleague.

On October 17, 1989, after eighty-six years on this earth (fifty spent in the service of the University of Georgia), Tom Askew departed for the undiscovered country. He succumbed peacefully in his hospital bed to heart failure, an ice cream in his hand and his two attractive grandchildren at his side.

As a youth, Tom Askew had excelled in his studies, winning a Phi Beta Kappa key (at Piedmont College) and admission to Pi Sigma Alpha (the University of Georgia). Following graduate studies in history and political science at the University of Georgia, he practiced journalism for three years with the Miami Herald (1924-27), taught history in Clarkesville, Georgia, at the 9th District A & M (1927-29), and then settled into residence in his beloved Athens, Georgia, as an instructor in history and political science at the University of Georgia (1929-35).

In 1935, an administrative opportunity opened up at Armstrong Junior College in Savannah and Tom tried his hand as a dean. By 1940, his administrative talents had carried him all the way to the presidency of the College. The war against Hitler interrupted this work and, in 1943, Tom went on active duty in the Navy, serving until the totalitarian demons were finally subdued in 1945. He then followed his heart back to Athens, rejoining the faculty of history and political science at the University of Georgia.

Tom rose steadily through the academic ranks. In addition to his heavy teaching responsibilities and research interests, Tom served the University in a wide variety of administrative posts, among them: registrar (1947-49), assistant to the president and director of public relations (1949-51), and dean of students (1949-55). His advice was much sought after, from the peaks of the University hierarchy to the lowliest entering freshmen (for whom he always had an open door).

Tom also served as the treasurer and corresponding secretary of the Southern Political Science Association (1935) and as Commanding Officer, U.S. Naval Reserve Electronics Unit in Athens (1955-61), among many other academic and civic posts. Among his writings stood the widely read The Government of