Philosophical Psychology

By Joseph Donceel, S.J.

21s. net

This textbook differs considerably from most of its kind. Here Father Donceel combines the essential features of the traditional course in Thomistic Psychology with a short, simple survey and critical evaluation of the most important data of contemporary experimental and dynamic psychology. Scientific and philosophical data are presented in two separate sections, which both makes clear the difference between the formal objects of the two disciplines, and makes easier the handling of the work by the student.
